

MX in silos, 100 B-1 bombers

Reagan unveils 5-point defense plan costing $180 billion

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — Announcing the most comprehensive upgrading of U.S. defenses since the Cold War, President Reagan proposed Friday a $180 billion plan putting 100 MX missiles in existing silos and building 100 B-1 bombers as a deterrent to Soviet attack.

The five-point program would modernize the nuclear missile, bomber and submarine force and rebuild the command, control and communications system and the North American air defense network over the next six years.

Announcing his $180.3 billion "strategy for defense" in a brief televised address from the White House, the president said the program will "keep the peace well into the next century."

Congress reacts — A3

"It's my hope that this program will prevent our adversaries from making the mistake others have made and deeply regretted in the past," Reagan said, "the mistake of underestimating the resolve and the will of the American people to defend their freedom and protect their homeland and their allies."

The plan is certain to face bitter congressional debate. Reagan ended years of debate by canceling the Carter administration's so-called "race-track plan" to shuttle 200 MX missiles among 4,600 underground shelters in Utah and Nevada and resurrecting the B-1 bomber killed by President Jimmy Carter.

Reagan said the race-track plan, which was opposed by the Mormon Church, ranchers, environmentalists and both Republican and Democratic politicians in the two states, would leave the missiles "just as vulnerable" as placing them in existing silos.

"No matter how many shelters we build, the Soviets can build more missiles more quickly, more cheaply," Reagan said.

Instead, the MX will be deployed in hardened Titan and Minuteman silos while studies continue on how to defend the missiles, each of which carries 10 warheads with the combined explosive force of 3.5 million tons of TNT. Reagan said a decision will be made by 1984.

Options include guarding them with anti-ballistic missiles, burying them in deep underground shelters or keeping them in continuous flight aboard patrolling aircraft.

Thirty-six MX missiles would be deployed in 1986; first in Titan II missile silos, hardened with additional steel and concrete, at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Arizona.

Next, they would be deployed among other Titan silos in Arkansas and Kansas and Minuteman III silos in Montana, North Dakota and Wyoming, defense officials said. No decision has been made on which or how many of the five states would get the MX. The MX will be too big to fit into Minuteman II sites in South Dakota and Missouri.

All 100 MXs would be in place between 1988 and 1989. Other provisions of the "Reagan strategic program" included:

Building 100 B-1B bombers by 1986 while deploying more than 2,000 cruise missiles aboard modified B-52s and developing a "stealth-type" bomber designed to elude radar detection for the 1990s. The price tag for the bombers could reach almost $20 billion.

'On target,' say Idaho congressmen

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — All four members of Idaho's congressional delegation believe President Ronald Reagan's strategic weapons proposal "is right on target."

"It's roughly the same conclusion I came to some time ago," said Sen. James McClure.

"The idea of building a whole bunch of bases spread out all over Utah, but with only a few missiles, is a deterrent system the Russians can meet very quickly," McClure said. "Reagan is now talking about placing the MX in existing silos that have been hardened to make them less vulnerable to attack. That will be much tougher for the Russians to cope with."

Reagan has proposed a diversified strategic weapons system that includes updated missile, bomber, communication and defense systems. He's asking for 100 MX missiles, 100 B-1 bombers, one Trident submarine a year beginning this year, and continued research on the radar-evading "stealth" bomber.

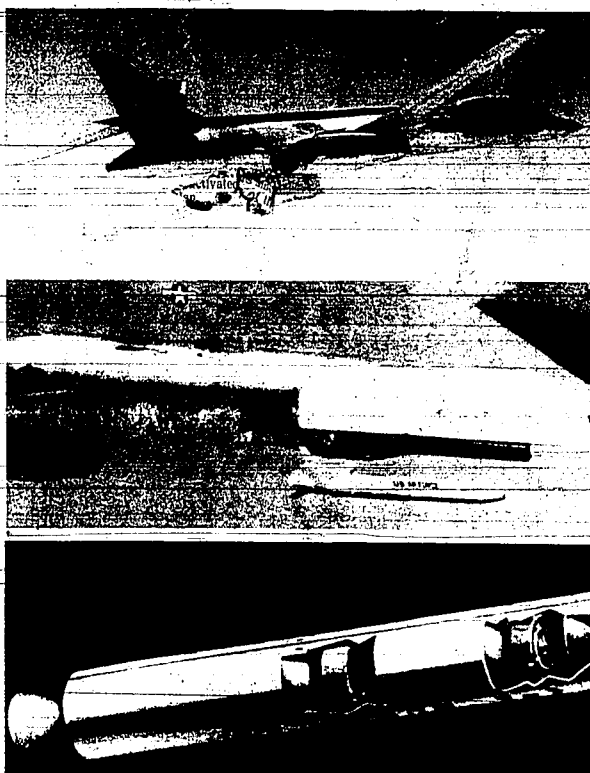

"It's a multiple package — one that is very comprehensive and dollar-wise," McClure said.

Rep. George Hansen echoed McClure. He said that the U.S. General Accounting Office had estimated the original $40 to $50 billion MX plan "would probably cost twice that. That's putting too many of our financial eggs in one basket."

"The MX system was a political nightmare dreamed up by the Carter administration to help get the Soviets to the SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) table," Hansen said. "It would have cost a lot of money, and it certainly had all sorts of environmental and water problems for the West."

"Also, a large MX system based in the West was unwise because it constituted too great a target for the Soviets, and the prevailing winds would have carried any fallout from a nuclear attack right over our most populated areas," he continued. "Spreading out the MX is a much smarter move."

Utah, Nevada relieved; Rockwell wins, Boeing big loser

By United Press International

Bomber builders were pleased in California, missile makers were disappointed in Washington state and most — but not all — residents of Nevada and Utah heaved a sigh of relief when President Reagan's defense decision were announced Friday.

The president's five-point program to modernize the country's nuclear defenses includes the deployment of MX weapons in existing silos — mostly in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona — and building of 100 updated B-1 bombers to replace aging B-52s.

"We are pleased by the administration's decision to go forward with a long range combat aircraft version of the B-1," said Robert Anderson, chairman of the board of Rockwell International, builder of the modern bomber.

A Rockwell spokeswoman said employment at the defense contractor's El Segundo, Calif., plant will grow from 1,600 jobs to around 8,500 by 1987 as a result of the decision. Rockwell plants in Palmdale, Calif., Columbus, Ohio, and Tulsa, Okla., will also expand considerably, she said.

The decision to scrap the "shell game" MX design in Nevada and Utah will mean the loss to the Boeing Co. in Washington state of $10 billion in contracts over 10 years. Boeing officials, shocked by the news, declined immediate comment.

The Carter Administration in 1977 awarded Boeing a $300 million design contract for proposed MX ground system, which would have involved deploying 200 missiles scattered among 4,600 shelters buried beneath the Utah and Nevada desert.

Boeing was to have built the simulated missiles, the transporters, the shelters, the security system around each shelter and the roads between the shelters, said Don Brannon, a spokesman for the aerospace firm.

He said the contract could have provided jobs for some 8,000 workers at the company's Kent, Wash., facilities.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., said he would support Nevada losing the MX site "if I am assured through testimony presented to the Armed Services Committee that it was made for the nation's security and not political reasons."

"Many people in Nevada will be pleased with this announcement, but others will be disappointed over the loss of potential jobs and economic development," he said.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, a staunch foe of the Nevada-Utah basing scheme, said he was "elated" by Reagan's decision. "I believe the decision will please most Utahns," he said.

Reagan's decision "takes a heavy load from the shoulders of Utah officials who will now be able to get on with the job of dealing with the impacts of energy development," he said.

"The people were heard finally," said a happy Gary Harrison, mayor of Ely, Nev., around which several MX silos were to have been built under the "shell game" plan.

"There are other things in White Pine County that will generate a lot better economic base than the MX," he said, noting that county voters rejected the MX by a close 2-1 margin in an advisory referendum in November, 1980.

"When you take on such giants as the military industrial complex and win, it's very satisfying," said Bill Vincent, state coordinator of Citizen Alert, an anti-MX group.

"We're very pleased that Nevada and Utah are not going to be a sponge or a bullseye for any enemy attack," he added.

Not all Nevadans or Utahns were pleased with the MX decision.

"We felt all along that the shell game concept was the best alternative for the national defense," said Charles Flemming, executive director of the pro-MX Greater Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce.

"Obviously, the president feels it should be done another way."

Callente, Nev., Mayor Keith Larson called the MX announcement "somewhat disappointing." He said the city had been counting on the MX to spur economic development in the area.

"We've been planning for MX and not going after other things. It's colored our approach," he said. "But just knowing the answer gives us direction at least."

8 million Americans out of work

Nation's jobless at 7.5%, highest in 5 months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate inched up to 7.5 percent in September, with nearly 8 million Americans looking for work and another 1.1 million too discouraged to try, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The rate was the highest in five months, and unemployment among blacks hit a new high of 16.3 percent since the department began keeping separate records on blacks.

The report came a day after President Reagan told a nationally televised news conference his economic program will create 13 million new jobs over the next several years, but noted the unemployment rate might fluctuate in the meantime.

On Capitol Hill, chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., of Congress Joint Economic Committee called the new figures "disquieting bad news."

"It is particularly disquieting since President Reagan's policies have been in place for months," Reuss said, adding that it appears the "country is being greeted by a recession."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the beginning of the new fiscal year Thursday "was D-Day for Reaganomics."

"The wealthy got their big tax breaks; everyone else got crumbs,"

O'Neill said Reagan is "gambling he can create jobs by giving big tax breaks to the wealthy of this country. That's a good bet for the wealthy. They get their tax breaks no matter what. It's a terrible bet for the unemployed. How do you get a tax cut if you don't even have a job?"

Despite the September jump, Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, predicted Reagan's economic program will cause unemployment to drop below 7 percent by the end of next year.

September's 16.3 percent unemployment level for blacks was up slightly from the 16.2 percent figure for last month, the Labor department reported.

For blacks aged 16-19, the September figure returned to near the July level, dropping from August's record of 50.7 percent to 40.2 percent.

"Despite the over-the-month improvement, however, the rate for black teens remains much higher than any other age group," said Commissioner Janet Norwood of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The overall unemployment figure for September was 9.3 percentage points above August's 7.2 percent rate, and marked the highest rate since the 7.6 percent level in May.

MX in silos, 100 B-1 bombers

Reagan unveils 5-point defense plan costing $180 billion

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — Announcing the most comprehensive upgrading of U.S. defenses since the Cold War, President Reagan proposed Friday a $180 billion plan putting 100 MX missiles in existing silos and building 100 B-1 bombers as a deterrent to Soviet attack.

The five-point program would modernize the nuclear missile, bomber and submarine force and rebuild the command, control and communications system and the North American air defense network over the next six years.

Announcing his $180.3 billion "strategy for deterrence" in a brief televised address from the White House, the president said the program will "keep the peace well into the next century."

Congress reacts — A3

"It's my hope that this program will prevent our adversaries from making the mistake others have made and deeply regretted in the past," Reagan said, "the mistake of underestimating the resolve and the will of the American people to defend their freedom and protect their homeland and their allies."

The plan is certain to face bitter congressional debate. Reagan ended years of debate by canceling the Carter administration's so-called "race-track plan" to shuttle 200 MX missiles among 100 underground shelters in Utah and Nevada and resurrecting the B-1 bomber killed by President Jimmy Carter.

Reagan said the race-track plan, which was opposed by the Mormon Church, ranchers, environmentalists and both Republican and Democratic politicians in the two states, would leave the missiles "just as vulnerable" as placing them in existing silos.

"No matter how many shelters we build, the Soviets can build more missiles more quickly, more cheaply," Reagan said.

Instead, the MX will be deployed in hardened Titan and Minuteman silos while studies continue on how to defend the missiles, each of which carries 10 warheads with the combined explosive force of 3.5 million tons of TNT. Reagan said a decision will be made by 1984.

Options include guarding them with anti-ballistic missiles, burying them in deep underground shelters or keeping them in continuous flight aboard patrolling aircraft.

Thirty-six MX missiles would be deployed in 1986; first in Titan II missile silos, hardened with additional steel and concrete, at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Arizona.

Next, they would be deployed among other Titan silos in Arkansas and Kansas and Minuteman III silos in Montana, North Dakota and Wyoming, defense officials said. No decision has been made on which or how many of the five states would get the MX. The MX will be too big to fit into Minuteman II sites in South Dakota and Missouri.

All 100 MXs would be in place between 1988 and 1989. Other provisions of the "Reagan strategic program" included:

- Building 100 B-1B bombers by 1986 while deploying more than 3,000 cruise missiles aboard modified B-52s and developing a "stealth-type" bomber designed to elude radar detection for the 1990s. The price tag for the bombers could reach almost $20 billion.

Utah, Nevada relieved; Rockwell wins, Boeing big loser

By United Press International

Bomber builders were pleased in California, missile makers were disappointed in Washington state and most — but not all — residents of Nevada and Utah heaved a sigh of relief when President Reagan's defense decision were announced Friday.

The president's five-point program to modernize the country's nuclear defenses includes the deployment of MX weapons in existing silos — mostly in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona — and building of 100 updated B-1 bombers to replace aging B-52s.

"We are pleased by the administration's decision to go forward with a long-ranger combat aircraft version of the B-1," said Robert Anderson, chairman of the board of Rockwell International, builder of the modern bomber.

A Rockwell spokeswoman said employment at the defense contractor's El Segundo, Calif., plant will grow from 1,600 jobs to around 8,500 by 1987 as a result of the decision. Rockwell plants in Palmdale, Calif., Columbus, Ohio, and Tulsa, Okla., will also expand considerably, she said.

The decision to scrap the "shell game" MX design in Nevada and Utah will mean the loss to the Boeing Co. in Washington state of $10 billion in contracts over 10 years. Boeing officials, shocked by the news, declined immediate comment.

The Carter Administration in 1977 awarded Boeing a $300 million design contract for proposed MX ground system, which would have involved deploying 200 missiles scattered among 4,600 shelters buried beneath the Utah and Nevada desert.

Boeing was to have built the simulated missiles, the transporters, the shelters, the security system around each shelter and the roads between the shelters, said Don Brannon, a spokesman for the aerospace firm.

He said the contract could have provided jobs for some 8,000 workers at the company's Kent, Wash., facilities.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., said he would support Nevada losing the MX site "if I am assured through testimony presented to the Armed Services Committee that it was made for the nation's security and not political reasons."

"Many people in Nevada will be pleased with this announcement, but others will be disappointed over the loss of potential jobs and economic development," he said.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, a staunch foe of the Nevada-Utah basing scheme, said he was "relieved" by Reagan's decision. "I believe the decision will please most Utahns," he said.

Reagan's decision "takes a heavy load from the shoulders of Utah officials who will now be able to get on with the job of dealing with the impacts of energy development," he said.

8 million Americans out of work

Nation's jobless at 7.5%, highest in 5 months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate inched up to 7.5 percent in September, with nearly 8 million Americans looking for work and another 1.1 million too discouraged to try, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The rate was the highest in five months, and unemployment among blacks hit a new high of 16.3 percent since the department began keeping separate records on blacks.

The report came a day after President Reagan told a nationally televised news conference his economic program will create 13 million new jobs over the next several years.

but noted the unemployment rate might fluctuate in the meantime. On Capitol Hill, chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., of Congress' Joint Economic Committee called the new figures "disappointing but new."

"It is particularly disquieting since President Reagan's policies have been in place for months," Reuss said, adding that it appears the "country is being greeted by a recession."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said the beginning of the new fiscal year Thursday "was D-Day for Reaganomics."

"The wealthy got their big tax breaks; everyone else got crumbs,"

O'Neill said Reagan is "gambling he can create jobs by giving big tax breaks to the wealthy of this country. That's a good bet for the wealthy. They get their tax breaks no matter what. It's a terrible bet for the unemployed. How do you get a tax cut if you don't even have a job?"

Despite the September jump, Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, predicted Reagan's economic program will cause unemployment to drop below 7 percent by the end of next year.

September's 16.3 percent unemployment level for blacks was up slightly from the 16.2 percent figure for last month, the Labor department reported.

For blacks aged 16-19, the September figure returned to near the "July" level, dropping from August's record of 50.7 percent to 49.2 percent.

"Despite the over-the-month improvement, however, the rate for black teens remains much higher than any other worker group," said Commissioner Janet Norwood of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The overall unemployment figure for September was 0.3 percentage points above August's 7.2 percent rate, and marked the highest rate since the 7.6 percent level in May.

The cruise missile guidance system

President's plan at a glance

- WASHINGTON (UPI)—Highlights of President Reagan's proposed announced Friday for upgrading United States strategic weapons systems:
- Bomber program
 - Build 100 new B-1 bombers with the first squadron to be in operation in 1986.
 - Continue research on the radar-evading "Stealth" bomber for deployment in the 1990s.
 - Modify newer B-52 bombers to carry cruise missiles; modernize selected aircraft for better protection against nuclear attack; improve selected aircraft to penetrate Soviet air defenses.
 - Retire older B-52 bombers within two years.
 - Put 3,000 cruise missiles on B-52s and B-1s, first squadron to be ready in 1982.
 - Outfit KC-135 tankers with new engines to increase range.
 - Missile program
 - Build and deploy at least 100 MX intercontinental ballistic missiles.
 - Scrap proposals to base MX in thousands of desert shelters.
 - Pick long-term basing plan by 1984.
 - Deploy some MX missiles "as soon as possible" in strengthened existing Titan or Minuteman missiles.
 - Deactivate all Titan missiles.
 - Sea forces
 - Build Trident missile submarines "at a steady rate" of one per year, including one for 1981.
 - Build "larger and more accurate" submarine-launched missile, the D-5, for deployment in 1989.
 - Base "several hundred nuclear-armed" cruise missiles on submarines beginning in 1984.
 - Communications systems
 - Improve "survivability, performance and coverage of radars and satellites used to warn of a Soviet missile attack."
 - Upgrade airborne command centers "that would direct U.S. strategic forces during a nuclear war."
 - Develop "survivable communications" between land, sea and air forces.
 - Initiate "vigorous and comprehensive" research and development of communications and control system "that would endure for an extended period beyond the first nuclear attack."
 - Strategic defense
 - Upgrade, with Canada, the North American radar network, including new over-the-horizon versions.
 - Deploy new F-15 fighter-bombers to replace five existing squadrons of F-106 interceptors.
 - Buy at least six AWACS radar planes.
 - Pursue an operational anti-satellite system.
 - Vigorously continue research and development of missile defense, including "space-based missile defense."
 - Expand civil defense programs.

Developing the Trident II nuclear missile for deployment on the Trident submarine beginning in 1989 and deploying "hundreds" of nuclear-tipped cruise missiles aboard submarines beginning in 1984.

Upgrading command and control and communications systems with satellites, ground-based radar and command-and-control aircraft to ensure the "United States would be able to retaliate against a nuclear strike."

Upgrading the North American air defense network in coordination with Canada, replacing aging F-106 fighters with F-15s, buying six more AWACS radar planes and pursuing vigorous research on ABM defense and expanding civil defense.

The most far-reaching program on strategic forces is the Eisenhower administration's "Stargate" program, which is intended to double by 1990 the number of strategic nuclear weapons "that could survive a Soviet nuclear attack on our country," a Pentagon background paper said.

The Reagan strategic program is affordable—it fits within the fiscal guidelines announced recently by the president," the paper said.

It said the Pentagon will spend less than 15 percent of the defense budget on strategic forces in each of the next five years compared with more than 20 percent in the early 1960s when the Minuteman missiles and B-52 bombers began rolling off the assembly lines.

"This program will enable us to modernize our strategic forces and at the same time meet our many other commitments as a nation," Reagan said.

A senior defense official said the plan, described as "probably one of the most important decisions ever made by a president," is not aimed at achieving nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union nor is it "a desire to start the arms race."

"The arms race is going on," he said. "The problem is that we haven't entered it."

The United States, he said, faces "a period of substantial danger" between 1984 and the deployment of the new systems in 1987.

"The Reagan program," the Pentagon said, "will create a deterrent to Soviet action against us that is far more secure and stable than exists today. The Reagan program will increase Soviet incentives to negotiate genuine arms reduction."

Iran claims raids on Iraq

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Iranian warplanes bombed four Iraqi hydroelectric power stations Friday in what Tehran said was retaliation for Iraqi air and ground attacks on "civilian" targets near the oil refining center of Abadan.

"But the Damascus air Iraqi military spokesman denied Iran had attacked its power plants, saying the Iranian report 'completely untrue' and said Iraqi airspace was not violated Friday by 'any hostile raids.'

Iran said its air raids caused heavy damage to four power plants in the north and south of Iraq.

In another development, Iran said its anti-aircraft batteries had shot down an Iraqi MiG fighter plane inside Iran near the southern city of Ahvaz. Another Iraqi jet escaped, the official Pars news agency said. Tehran radio also said Iranian warplanes shot down two Iraqi MiGs north of Iran's Khuzestan province in a dogfight Wednesday.

Next shuttle in November

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI)—It probably will be early November before the damaged space shuttle Columbia is repaired and ready to make its second orbital test flight, launch director George Page said Friday.

He also said the launch delay, which may amount to about four weeks, will probably push the shuttle's third orbital test flight from mid-January into February. But overall, he said, the mishap will have little impact on the multi-billion dollar space transportation program.

Technicians working around the clock have already replaced 89 of 955 vital insulation tiles loosened Sept. 22 when a valve stuck open and allowed corrosive propellant to spill down the Columbia's side.

He said at a Kennedy Space Center news conference that the accident caused launch planners by surprise. "Murphy's law sort of got us there," Page said. "We should have looked enough to say we can have this type of failure, but we didn't."

About three gallons of nitrogen tetroxide ran down the side of the spacecraft, acting as a solvent on the glue that held the tiles to the Columbia.

Michigan asks disaster aid

By United Press International

Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken Friday asked President Reagan to declare an emergency in the storm-swept state and sought disaster designations from the federal Agriculture Department and Small Business Administration.

A storm Thursday dumped up to 10 inches of rain on parts of southern Michigan. At the height of the storm, 185,000 homes and businesses were without power and Detroit's freeway system was all but shut down.

Flooding damaged as much as $50 million in crops, officials said.

One person, a stranded pickup truck driver, drowned near Fowler in Clinton County.

Damage to roads, storm sewers and county drains threatens public health, Milliken said.

The Washington-based National Flood Insurance Program said it expected about 3,500 Michigan policyholders to file flood damage claims. A special temporary claims office was opened in Troy.

Jazz star Dorothy Scott dead

NEW YORK (UPI)—Hazel Dorothy Scott, the jazz nightclub pianist and former wife of the late U.S. Congressman Adam Clayton Powell Jr., died Friday in Manhattan. She was 61.

Miss Scott, a Manhattan resident, died shortly after 8 p.m. in Mt. Sinai Medical Center.

Friends said she had been hospitalized since August. Miss Scott's son said his mother had been suffering from an advanced form of cancer of the pancreas.

In 1938, she had her own radio series and in 1938, she made her Broadway debut, singing "FDR Jones" in the musical "Sing Out the News." Her recording debut came one year later.

During Miss Scott's career, she played with various bands and in supper clubs throughout the United States, earning a large following between 1939 and 1945 in her appearances at Cafe Society Downtown, a Greenwich Village jazz club.

In addition, she appeared in films, including "Rhapsody in Blue" and "I Dood It."

Today's weather

Cooler temperatures this weekend, maybe more rain

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:

Cooler with variable clouds and occasional showers through Sunday. Northwesterly winds 10 to 15 mph. Highs today and Sunday upper 50s to middle 60s. Lows in the 30s.

Camas Prairie, Halley, Wood River valley:

Showers decreasing and becoming mostly snow showers over higher elevations becoming partly cloudy Sunday. Windy at times. Highs middle 50s to low 60s both days. Lows middle 20s to low 30s.

Northern Nevada and Utah:

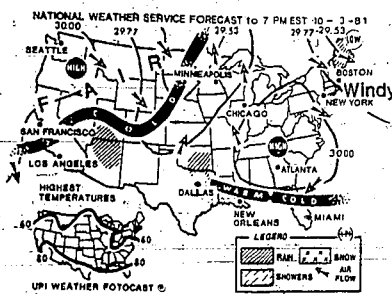

Scattered showers early today, clearing gradually tonight and becoming mostly sunny on Sunday with a few showers over the mountains. Colder with highs in the 60s. Lows 25 to 35 tonight.

Synopsis:

Showers activity which began Friday over the Magic Valley should decrease today but temperatures will turn cooler as skies clear.

A cold front approaching the state produced a variety of weather — mild in the southeast, cloudy and rainy over the central mountains, and partly cloudy in the panhandle. The cold front lost some of its punch after crossing northern parts of the state and became somewhat diffuse over the southwest by Friday evening.

Winds were strong and gusty over all Idaho, with velocities of 20 to 25 mph common.

Rainfall totals for Friday afternoon included .38 inch at Mullan, .14 at Grangeville, and .10 at Lewiston. Some of the amounts reported during the 24 hour period approached half an inch.

Stanley's 18 degrees was the coldest on Friday morning with 21 at Fairfield. Afternoon readings were generally in the 50s, although Burley reported 75 degrees at mid-afternoon. The state's warmest was 77 at Burley.

The Twin Falls pollen count Friday was 40 per cubic meter of air.

The extended forecast calls for dry weather Monday and Tuesday but a chance of showers on Wednesday. Temperatures will range from highs in the middle 60s to middle 70s to lows in the middle 30s to middle 40s.

In the Magic Valley, conditions for harvesting and other outside farm work will remain generally good through Wednesday, but hay drying may be interrupted at times by weekend showers.

Minimum soil temperatures for the potato harvest will generally remain above 45 degrees this morning. The Twin Falls key station minimum Friday was 48.

Spraying conditions will be fair to poor today with winds of 8 to 18 mph.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the warmest temperature was 95 degrees at Alice, Texas, and the coldest was 20 at Hibbing, Minn., and Milbank, S.D.

The updated B-1 plane with punch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It has been seven years since the first prototype of the B-1 bomber took flight, and even though the basic design is now about 10 years old, an updated version will give the plane more of an offensive punch.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Friday the B-1B is capable of penetrating Soviet air defenses well into the current decade while the aging B-52 is not.

The first two of 100 planes, built by Rockwell-International, will be ready this year with a recommended purchase rate of seven in 1983, nine in 1984, 35 in 1985 and 46 in 1986, Air Force Maj. Don Brownlee said.

The first squadron will be operational in 1986.

Though equipped with the same engines as the original B-1 and capable of supersonic speeds, the new version will not fly as fast. One reason for the slower speed: more modern offensive and defensive avionics packages will boost its gross takeoff weight from 395,000 to 477,000 pounds.

According to the editors of authoritative British publication "Jane's All the World's Aircraft," the B-1, which went through several stages of improvement before it was scrapped in 1977, can carry up to 32 air-to-ground nuclear missiles, or 115,000 pounds of free-falling bombs.

Tower most vocal critic; Baker supportive

Strategy to set off battle in Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The plan that President Reagan announced Friday to build a new $180 billion strategic arsenal disappointed a Senate ally but other members of Congress had praise for at least some elements.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., expressed the view of a number of congressmen when he said that Reagan had built "500... The MX-tris is a very good idea, the B-1 is a turkey."

The strongest criticism came from Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who said, "I am gravely disappointed in President Reagan's strategic modernization package. For the cost of the program, I believe it provides far less capability than is required."

Tower heads the Senate Armed Services Committee, which will open hearings on the plan Monday by taking testimony from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said that "in general terms, I will support it." He told reporters the package provides a realistic balance between the requirements for security and economy, and practically.

"The president made the right decision," Baker said. "I think the president's proposal is a good, sound and sensible approach to the future security of the United States."

"There will be controversy in both houses of Congress about virtually every element of the plan, but I think the president will succeed in the Congress," he said.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., chairman of the strategic and theater nuclear forces subcommittee, also predicted the "program will be eventually adopted as basically proposed by the president."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., another armed services committee member, said the plan deserves a "positive congressional study." "It is a positive step in meeting our defense problems," he said.

Committee member Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he was "delighted" over the new MX plan but "keenly disappointed" over the decision to produce the B-1 bomber.

Tower warned the proposal to base 100 MX missiles in existing sites "seriously degrades the planned modernization of our land-based leg of the (nuclear) triad" just as President Jimmy Carter's 1977 decision to cancel the B-1 weakened the triad's airborne leg.

"I am enormously skeptical to the point of feeling that this plan doesn't give us enough added capability for the money involved and leaves us with a highly vulnerable land-based system," Towers said.

Tower stopped short of calling Reagan's decision a political one but said "it appears to have been made within a small circle of friends — largely people in the White House — without coordinating it with technical and military experts."

Reagan's 1980 campaign chairman and close political ally, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., was among opponents of a plan rejected by House to shuttle 200 MX missiles among 4,600 underground shelters to be built in Nevada and Utah.

But Baker dismissed any political implications.

Reagan's decision doesn't defuse debate over U.S.-Soviet missiles

By PETER J. BERNSTEIN
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Will the United States be safe from a surprise Soviet attack without a mobile system of MX nuclear missiles?

The Reagan administration's decision to deploy MX missiles in existing silos rather than rotating them among desert-based shelters may pose serious security problems if, as seems likely, the Soviets have the ability to blow them up, according to hawkish defense analysts.

Other defense experts contend that President Reagan's approach could spark a new arms race, including production of anti-ballistic missiles to defend the MX system. Such a costly arms buildup would make neither the United States nor the Soviet Union any more secure.

Reagan evidently rejected both views in deciding to deploy the MX missile in stages as part of an overall plan to strengthen the nation's strategic defenses over the next decade.

The plan calls for deploying 100 MX missiles — carrying 1,000 nuclear warheads, producing a variant of the B-1 long-range bomber that had been rejected by President Carter, building the more advanced Stealth bombers that will be undetectable by radar, and accelerating work on a new longer-range missile for the Trident submarine.

The plan also calls for upgrading the nation's communications and control systems so that messages can be sent to bombers and submarines in the event of a nuclear attack.

This strategic weapons program — which defense officials say will cost $180.3 billion over the next six years, or 15 percent of the total projected defense budget — is certain to stir intense debate in Congress.

Under the Reagan plan, Titan and Minuteman missile silos will be converted for the MX by adding more steel and concrete to help withstand nuclear explosions.

Senior defense officials explained that roughly a third of the MX missiles will be placed in the silos beginning in 1983, with the Titans being the most likely first sites. Titan bases are located in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona. All existing Titan missiles, developed in the 1960s, are to be deactivated and discarded under the plan.

Most of the Minuteman force to be replaced by the MX system is housed in North Dakota and South Dakota.

Pentagon officials say 95 percent of the aging Minuteman and Titan missiles are vulnerable to a Soviet first strike.

The Reagan plan provides three options for deploying the remaining 60 or so MX missiles.

By 1984, the government would decide whether to put the MX aboard specially designed aircraft capable of launching the missiles, or to place them in deep underground shafts in the Western United States.

A third option would be to develop a ballistic-missile defense capable of knocking out incoming Soviet missiles.

Critics of the MX system, led by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., maintain that deployment of the missiles threatens new dangers of world instability. For one thing, the Soviets might build the missile arsenal they would need to devastate even the most complex MX basing system.

The B-1 bomber decision should have been made a long time ago, but it's still just as necessary," McClure said. "The Stealth bomber can't come soon enough and our old B-52s aren't going to last. In addition to playing an interim role, the B-1 will still be a sound strategic tool after the Stealth bomber is available."

Although Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, supported the present B-52s with Model-A Forde, he retains reservations about the B-1 proposal.

"There's no question we need a new bomber," Craig said. "It is somewhat reserved about the B-1, however, until I see the exact costs of the proposal. I could support the B-1 if it's not too expensive."

Craig is especially pleased with Reagan's inclusion of expanded civil defense programs in the new proposal.

"Nothing has been done on civil defense in the last 10 years, while Russia has made tremendous steps in this area," Craig said.

"If we were to be attacked tomorrow, our people would stack up in the streets and trample themselves for not knowing what to do," said Craig. "No one remembers much about civil defense anymore."

Craig also applauded Reagan for stressing "survivability of communications and defense systems" in addition to inflating the new programs.

"The President has made a wise decision from cost and strategic defense standpoints," agreed Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

"I have always been very skeptical of the (MX) race track mode and what the president is now proposing — placing missiles in fixed silos — is a much better concept," Symms said.

"Now it is important for us to accelerate the development of an anti-ballistic missile system so the land-based intercontinental ballistic missile system can really be defended."

Symms said that during his tours of Idaho this summer, people repeatedly stressed maintaining a strong national defense. He said Reagan's strategic weapons proposal meets that desire.

Glenn gets hot over Tanya, police have to cool him off

By United Press International

When country singer Glenn Campbell got mad at his on-again-off-again girlfriend Tanya Tucker in Bossier City, La., the cops nearly ran him in. Bossier City police sergeant Ricky Spier says they were called in when Campbell was found "cussing and raising all kind of Cain" outside her hotel room. They warned Campbell, then escorted him to his room where Miss Tucker's bodyguard handed over some of his belongings from her room. "You can tell when someone's under the influence of alcohol," Spier said. "In my professional opinion, he definitely was." Campbell could not be reached for comment. The two singers were engaged for a while last year but later broke it off.

ARMY CUSSIN'

The army general was so shocked when he heard some soldiers say a bad word that he dressed their major down in front of them and in less than an hour had him transferred to another post. The general was Maj.

Gen. Edward A. Partain, commander of Fort Riley, Kan. The major was Maj. Stanley Daugherty, a 13-year veteran who served as a helicopter pilot in Vietnam. The soldiers were members of Daugherty's Company C, 1st Aviation Battalion. The word, uttered by about a dozen of the 300 men in the company as they ended a march cadence while marching in a parade, was a common bannard vulgarism. Daugherty's new post is Fort Bragg, N.C., where he will be a staff officer at the base's U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance-His official army record remains unblemished.

SNAKE CUSSIN'

And in Palatka, Fla. WYD disc jockey Bob Henry started his midday listeners with a "Holy —! It's a snake." Listeners then heard fast-moving feet and the control room door slamming. Henry returned to the control room several times during the next 20 minutes to break the on-the-air silence with calls for help. Jill Walker, a former zoo attendant, rushed to the station with a snake hook, cornered the four-foot reptile, and deposited it in a wooded area across the street — getting bitten three times in the process. "It's only a harmless, non-poisonous black snake. His bite feels like a pinprick to your skin," she explained. Henry, who's a city boy from the Bronx, N.Y., said, "It was my first close encounter with a Florida snake. I think I suffered a mini-heart attack."

SETTLEMENT REACHED

A tentative settlement has been reached in a $14-million suit filed by the family of former Virginia-Tech football player Bob Vorhies, who died four years ago after running strenuous punishment drills. Vorhies' mother, Delores, and brother, Tim, said the agreement includes a monetary payment to the family and a promise by Virginia Tech not to force athletes to undergo punishment drills in future. Vorhies, 18, died from a heart problem in his dormitory Nov. 21, 1977. He had just finished running a series of punishment drills for kicking in a dormitory door the night before a football game.

Known for civil rights writings

Author Harry Golden dead at 78

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Best-selling author Harry Golden, who left the tenements of New York and a jail term behind him to become an eloquent and sometimes humorous voice of the civil rights movement in the South, died at his home Friday after a prolonged illness. He was 78.

Golden was the author of nearly two dozen books and for 26 years he published the monthly newspaper "The Carolina Israelite" that led the civil rights movement at a time other Southern publications remained silent.

"I get away with my ideas in the South, because no Southerner takes me — a Jew, a Yankee, and a radical seriously," Golden once said. "They mostly think of a Jew as a kind of substitute Negro anyway."

Along with his civil rights work, Golden was well known for his chronicles of life of New York's Jewish immigrants. His best known work, "Only in America," was a collection of essays from the newspaper that soared to the best-seller list after its publication in 1958.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Temple Israel. Burial will follow in the Hebrew Cemetery in Charlotte.

Born Harry Goldhirsch on May 6, 1903, the son of Jewish-Austrian immigrants, he grew up in a four-room tenement in New York, a childhood that deeply influenced his later works as he described the sights, sounds, smells, and the people of the Lower East Side.

After bankruptcy and pleading guilty to bank fraud, Golden abandoned writing. Vorhies, 18, died from a heart problem in his dormitory Nov. 21, 1977. He had just finished running a series of punishment drills for kicking in a dormitory door the night before a football game.

"Harry Golden was unique among writers of his period," said C.A. "Pete" McKnight, editor of The Charlotte News from 1949 to 1954 and editor of The Charlotte Observer from 1954 until 1976. "He lived and worked in the South. He had a tremendous mind, a great memory and was a master at using wit and satire in dealing with regional issues, especially segregation."

"We will not see another Harry Golden," said McKnight.

A clearance sale, on traffic tickets

EAST CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — Act now, or you might miss James DeVinne's half-price, going-out-of-business sale — on parking tickets.

DeVinne is an East Cleveland Municipal Court judge, and he's offering a half-price courtroom clearance deal on outstanding parking tickets until he steps down from the bench at year's end.

DeVinne, 58, has served on the suburban Cleveland bench for 11 years but did not seek re-election. His replacement will be selected Nov. 3.

As far as DeVinne is concerned, this is one sale where everything must go.

"I'm trying to clean up the books before I leave the bench," he said in explaining the unusual offer.

The judge's special allows all parking tickets that regularly go for $10 to be paid in person at the court for $5. That's cash only, no checks or credit cards, please.

'All-Savers' race to beat lower rate

By United Press International

Americans flocked to savings institutions across the country Friday to cash in on the new tax-exempt "All Savers" certificate before the interest rate goes down on Monday.

Eager buyers began lining up outside financial institutions in the early morning to invest in the certificates while the yield was still set at 12.61 percent. On Monday, the rate drops to 12.14 percent.

Bankers were hoping for an onslaught of customers after only a modest response Thursday, and many of them got it.

"It's just unbelievable," said Willis Stevenson, president of Atlantic Permanent Savings and Loan Association in Norfolk, Virginia's second largest S&L. "Two branches have them lined up outside, another office had 20 customers when it opened up this morning."

"It's been extremely busy," said Dick Kennedy, a vice president of New York's Citibank, the nation's second largest bank. "I manage six branches and all of them are jumping. Every branch has lines."

Many institutions planned to discontinue their normal "bankers hours" and stay open late into the evening Friday and open up for business Saturday.

In Tennessee, bankers said business picked up sharply in the afternoon. Security Federal said it sold $1 million worth of certificates. Commerce Union Bank more than $3 million, and First American Bank reported selling "several million dollars" worth.

The savings industry, beset by the loss of billions in deposits to the popular high-yielding money market funds and other investments, were banking on the new certificate to bring back those billions.

For those in a tax bracket above 30 percent, the tax-free feature of All Savers generally makes it more profitable than taxable interest earned from other savings certificates or a money market fund.

Individuals can earn up to $1,000 of interest on the certificates (an investment of $9,237) without Uncle Sam claiming his normal share. Couples can earn up to $2,000 tax-free (on $18,474).

Sailor abuse at Norfolk investigated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cases of "brutalities and misconduct" against some sailors at the Norfolk, Va., Navy base were reported to Congress Friday by Rep. Harold Hollenbeck, R-N.J.

In some instances, men were handcuffed to chairs all night or handcuffed to bunks while beaten by guards, Hollenbeck said in a report to a House armed services subcommittee.

The report said the incidents occurred at Nimitz Hall, a transient personnel unit at the Norfolk base housing about 900 sailors.

Hollenbeck said many of the problems result from housing sailors awaiting non-disciplinary action, such as new orders or discharge, along with those awaiting court-martial or civilian court proceedings.

The most serious allegations related to conditions at Nimitz Hall involve mistreatment of naval personnel, particularly, but not limited to, those awaiting disciplinary action," the report said.

"They include reports of beatings, physical and verbal abuse by chasers (escorts) and masters-at-arms, overcrowding, poor sanitary conditions, understaffing, theft and administrative difficulties."

Hollenbeck based his report on letters, phone calls and personal conversations with sailors.

A sailor reportedly had his identification card confiscated and lost liberty when it was learned he contacted his congressman to complain about conditions in the hall.

USS Ranger doctor shocked at mistreatment

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — A navy prisoner abuse hearing recessed Friday following testimony by the USS Ranger's former senior medical officer that he was "surprised and shocked" to find extensive bruises on two sailors apparently beaten in the aircraft carrier's brig.

The recess until Monday was called to await arrival of out-of-town witnesses.

The Article 32 investigative hearing will determine whether Capt. Lee Cargill, former Ranger executive officer, and Lt. Cmdr. Comer Williams, who was in charge of rehabilitation facilities, should stand courts-martial for de-relition of duty by permitting inhumane treatment.

The two officers are among 28 Ranger personnel charged in connection with prisoner abuse following an investigation of Ranger brig and Correctional Custody Unit conditions triggered by the heat exhaustion death in the Philippines last April of Seaman Paul Terlice, 20, Algonac, Mich.

Cmdr. Jefferson Emery, the medical officer called by the defense, said of Terlice's death, "I believe that it was an accident."

But Emery said of another prisoner, Lloyd R. Chester Jr., "I was surprised and shocked to see the bruises. I wasn't accustomed to seeing people bruised. It was so shocking to see someone bruised in the (CCU) program, it was like red flags."

He said Chester had bruises over 60 percent of his upper body. He said he immediately notified Williams because Cargill was on bridge duty and could not be reached. "I was satisfied they were aware of the problem and something was being done," he testified.

Four PHS hospitals told to stop accepting patients

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration ordered Public Health Service hospitals in Boston, Baltimore, Seattle and Staten Island to stop accepting patients Friday, rebuffing congressmen who hope to find money to run the facilities under new owners.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker ordered the four hospitals to stop accepting patients immediately and to shut their doors by Oct. 31.

Congress has ordered all eight PHS hospitals closed or turned over to new owners by Nov. 1. New owners have been found for four hospitals.

Although bids were received for the other four, Schweiker said lawmakers appropriated "insufficient funds" to renovate the hospitals and keep them open during repairs. PHS officials said they told congressional appropriations committees that $170.9 million was needed to close down the PHS hospital system and renovate the four hospitals needing repairs.

Solidarity re-elects Walesa

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Lech Walesa was resoundingly re-elected chairman of the Solidarity union, beating back three radical challengers and vowing to "continue peaceful warfare" with Poland's Communist authorities.

"We are able to outmaneuver the strongest army," said a jubilant Walesa, who had threatened to resign if he were defeated in the vote to continue leading the union he has headed since its founding August 1980 in the Gdansk shipyard strike.

"We shall learn democracy. We shall continue peaceful warfare," he said, in reference to still-unresolved conflicts with authorities.

Walesa, who won 462 votes out of 844 cast and had appeared nervous with his hands shaking as he dropped his vote in the ballot box, was lifted high into the air and the entire Congress then rose to give the 38-year-old labor leader a standing ovation for several minutes.

As Walesa, who 14 months ago was an unemployed electrician until he climbed the fence during the shipyard strike at the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk, beamed to the crowd and photographers flashed their bulbs, members of the congress presidium hugged and kissed each other.

The delegates then rose to sing "Sto Lat," or "May you live 100 years" — the Polish equivalent to "For he's a jolly good fellow."

Bomb rocks Spanish destroyer

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Suspected Basque terrorists bombed a Spanish destroyer, blowing a nine-foot hole in the vessel in a dawn attack, but the 318 sleeping crewmen escaped harm.

"If it had come a few feet toward the bow, many people could have died," said the captain of the Marques de la Ensenada, explaining the crew's sleeping quarters were near the bow on the vessel, part of anti-guerrilla task force patrolling Spain's northern coast.

An anonymous telephone caller saying he represented Basque terrorists claimed responsibility for blast in the northern port of Santander and warned a second would be made against a ship at sea.

The ship's captain said that at the moment of the explosion an anonymous caller telephoned the ship to warn that a "firecracker" would go off at 5 a.m.

A navy spokesman in Madrid said the explosion, at 5 a.m., was caused by a "very powerful" bomb attached to a strut on the jetty, where the Marques de la Ensenada was moored.

France says spy swap in works

PARIS (UPI) — France is seeking to swap an East German general jailed as a Communist spy for a major Soviet dissident such as Anatoly Shcharansky, French government sources said Wednesday.

In Bonn, officials said that although West Germany had freed East German spy Guenter Guillaume Thursday to get its own agents out of Communist jails, East Germany had failed to free as many Westerners as hoped because of publicity surrounding the swap.

"Some people will unfortunately stay a little longer under wraps in East Germany," said Egon Franke, Minister for Inner German Relations.

West German spokesman Kurt Becker said the swap set in motion by Guillaume's release should be wrapped up soon. Some 30 agents were released from East German jails in return but it was not the full number promised, sources said.

French government sources said the proposed swap involving East German spy Gen. Heinz Zorn was not part of the Guillaume deal. Earlier reports leaked to the press had said Zorn was originally included in the swap.

Cruise missiles win nod in Italy

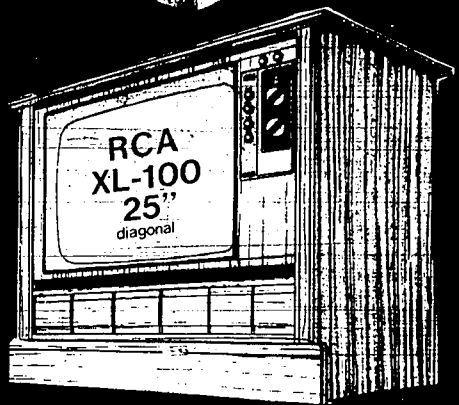

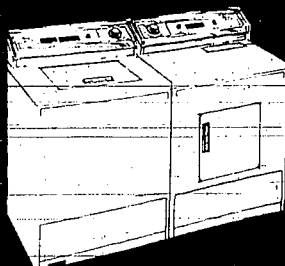

ROME (UPI) — In a major boost for the Reagan administration, Italy's parliament narrowly endorsed Friday a plan to deploy American Cruise missiles in Sicily if U.S.-Soviet negotiations on arms cuts fail.

Following two days of spirited debate highlighted by Communist opposition to the missiles, the government won a secret ballot endorsing Italy's pro-American foreign policy by 244 votes to 225, with one abstention.

Political sources said the government of Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini obtained such a small margin on the vote because the balloting was held two hours earlier than expected, when only 470 deputies were in the 630-seat chamber.

Deadline near for candidate petition filing

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With Tuesday's deadline drawing near, nominating petitions for candidates in November's municipal elections gradually are being filed.

Nominating petitions still are available at the various city halls and must be returned to the respective city clerk by 5 p.m. this Tuesday, Oct. 6. The number of signatures required varies according to the population in each community.

Here's a rundown of the positions open and the people who had filed by mid-week:

In Twin Falls, three four-year council seats are open, including the mayor's post. Mayor Hank Woodall has announced he will not seek re-election.

Those who have filed are Lee Heider, Jack Miller and incumbent Emory Petersen.

Incumbent Mary McCluskey and Michael Cross have obtained petitions but have not filed, according to the city clerk's office. Seven more petitions have been taken out.

In Jerome, the mayor's job and three council seats — one, two-year and two four-year terms — are open.

Ralph Peters has filed a petition for the mayor's post. Mayor Marshall Everheart has indicated he will not run.

Jeanne Vandiver has filed a petition for the two-year seat being vacated by Peters. Incumbent Glen Capps and Walt Bentzinger have filed for the four-year terms. Three more petitions have been taken out but not filed. The other contested council seat is now held by Mason Brooks.

In Buhl, two council seats and the mayor's post are open. Councilman Jack Fields has filed for re-election. Petitions have been obtained but not filed by Jim Barker, Pat Dickard, Robert Leich and Wayne Moberg, according to the city clerk's office.

Mayor Dale Christensen and Councilman Dale Thornberry have said they will retire.

In Burley, three four-year council seats and the mayor's post are open. Only one person, incumbent Councilman Leonard King, has filed. About

Finally — cable switchover begins

TWIN FALLS — A day behind schedule, weary Magic Valley Cablevision employees began making the company's controversial program changes Friday.

The new package of services, which features Boise stations in place of Salt Lake City stations, an all-news channel, children's programming, cultural programming and an all-sports channel, was turned on first in Jerome, said Gene Ritnour, Cablevision's area manager. The change was completed in Jerome at about 7 p.m.

The switching of channels began shortly after that in Twin Falls, Filer, Kimberly and Hansen.

The change will be made sometime today for Gooding viewers and not until at least Monday in Wendell, Ritnour said.

In the month and a half since the plans for the changes were announced, thousands of people have called Cablevision to complain, written letters or signed petitions protesting the move. They felt that substituting Boise stations for Salt Lake City channels would lower the quality of programming available.

Cablevision serves about 13,000 homes.

The change was delayed when equipment in the company's main broadcasting tower in Filer malfunctioned. A faulty power tube was replaced Friday, allowing the switch to proceed, Ritnour said.

Cablevision employees had worked almost all night Wednesday and Thursday trying to make the switch.

Sen. Israel Merrill of Blackfoot may battle Hansen for Congress

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BLACKFOOT — Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, may get some stiff opposition from the Democratic camp in the 1982 election.

State Sen. Israel "Is" Merrill, D-Blackfoot, said Friday he may seek Idaho's Second Congressional District seat and will "make a decision by November."

"I'm giving it a considerable amount of thought and have been talking to people around the state to see about support," he said.

Marie Hazel, the chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party, said Merrill would be "one of the strongest candidates ever to oppose Hansen because Is is quite conservative in his opinions. That's really important to the people in this district."

If he decides to run, Merrill said he probably would not officially announce his candidacy until June. However, he added that should he decide not to run, that decision will be announced sometime next month.

"I think I am the most conservative Democrat in the Senate," Merrill said. "All through my 12 years of exposure to the Legislature, I've had a deep, set opinion about what makes a good congressman. The most important thing for accomplishing that job is not being radical, either to the left or to the right."

Merrill, a 52-year-old Blackfoot merchant, cited two major reasons for considering a congressional campaign: a lack of accurate representation for Second District residents and good timing in his personal life.

"A lot of people have told me they think we're not getting proper representation in that congressional seat," Merrill said.

Merrill said he believes Idahoans traditionally vote to achieve balance between conservative and liberal views, citing the state's present system of a Democratic governor and Republican-heavy Legislature.

"Those people who in the past voted for both Frank Church (former Democratic senator) and George Hansen, thinking they're voting for some type of balance, no longer have Church for that balance," Merrill said.

"Sen. (James) McClure follows somewhat middle ground, but our other three congressional delegates sit very much to the radical right. I believe, I think a candidate with my conservative views would stand a good chance of being elected," he said.

During his 12 years in the Legislature, six in the House and six in the Senate, Merrill has served on all categories of committees except the judicial. He said this gives him "a well-rounded knowledge of government" and would be an advantage in serving in Washington, D.C.

"I have about a month to think this through, yet," Merrill said. "My wife and I will be traveling back east in that time, and I imagine I will talk to a few more people in Washington, D.C. before making a final decision."

"I've seriously considered for some time now, and since our children are grown now, it is an ideal time to make the move," Merrill said. "It's simply a good time in my life for a change like this."

Wood season

Joe Roudy of Twin Falls stacks another log on an already large pile. With colder weather here, many people already have stockpiles of winter fuel at the ready. For those who haven't been thinking of the winter and need wood, information concerning cutting permits as well as locations to cut can be obtained through the Forest Service.

Work begins soon on Murtaugh bridge

By LAURY MASHER
Times-News writer

Twin Falls engineering firm of Edwards, Howard and Martens Engineers Inc.

"We would anticipate that a contractor will be selected in November," he said.

The bridge should be completed before summer.

Martens said the Federal Highway Administration will finance 80 percent of the $300,000 cost of the bridge, while the remainder will be financed by Jerome and Twin Falls counties and the Hillsdale and Murtaugh highway districts.

The two-span bridge will be constructed 70 feet above the Snake River, Martens said. It will be 34 feet wide and 290 feet long, with steel girders and a concrete deck.

The existing bridge, which Martens said was built in 1916, links the Jerome County community of Hazelton with the Twin Falls County community of Murtaugh.

Martens said that if the existing bridge was not replaced, it would need to be closed.

Plans to replace the bridge were in the making more than a year ago, but Martens said they were delayed because the National Historical Society wanted to consider the bridge for the historical register.

Martens said the society decided to include the bridge in the historical register, and it needed time to research the bridge and take pictures of it before it could be removed.

Teachers meet with board on contract talks

TWIN FALLS — An after-school negotiation session between teachers and the school board spurred some progress Friday.

Dick Chilcote, chief negotiator for the teachers, said some "very definite progress was made" at the meeting.

He refused to release details of the talks due to "the delicate nature of the situation."

Contract bargaining had become deadlocked Wednesday, Sept. 2, with a board base salary offer of $11,500. The teachers were requesting $11,800 and warned that the only option left was binding arbitration, which the board has rejected.

Monday of this week, the teachers launched a media campaign in hopes of bringing public pressure to bear on the board. Chilcote refused to comment on the effect of the campaign, but said ads have been cancelled for the weekend.

Groundbreaking opens work on elderly housing complex

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Construction of a controversial senior-citizen housing complex got under way Friday after three months of delays.

Crews broke ground off Caswell Avenue West for a 60-unit complex being built by Christian Church Homes of Idaho, with a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development loan.

Rent will be determined by the income level of the residents. Twelve of the units will be designed to accommodate persons confined to wheelchairs.

The project has been opposed by the Twin Falls Housing Authority, which contended that this area already has enough subsidized rental units for the elderly. Others have said the project will undermine the market for private apartment owners.

HUD authorities did reconsider funding the project, but a housing survey taken by HUD in July and released in August apparently eliminated any reservations about proceeding.

"We honestly believe, after the survey, that there is an established need in the community (for the housing)," said Jack Threlkeld, the president of Home Plumbing and Heating, the project's general contractor. The architect is David S. Shurtleff Associates.

Named the Valley Vista Village, the project will be financed by a $7.65 million low-interest loan from HUD. Threlkeld said about $9 million will be paid back to the government over the 40-year period of the loan.

The complex and its grounds will cover about 10 acres. It includes 13 separate buildings and a central facility for laundry. The units, all one-bedroom apartments, will be equipped with an emergency call system linked with the live-in manager.

Design plans call for two large garden plots for the tenants' use.

Threlkeld said the contract calls for a construction time of 10 months, but the project may be finished in spring if weather permits.

He said construction has been delayed by various factors, but most were not linked to the controversy over the project.

State auditor almost an institution

Van Engelen may challenge Auditor Williams

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Sen. Dean Van Engelen, R-Burley, says he may challenge state Auditor Joe Williams in the 1982 election.

"I haven't decided for sure, but I'm thinking I might as well give it a try," Van Engelen, 52, said Friday. "I'm going to be talking to a lot of people to see where the support is and to make sure there is a Republican candidate to take my place (for the Senate)."

Van Engelen said he would announce his political intentions sometime around the first of the year.

Williams, a 77-year-old Democrat, has served as auditor for six consecutive four-year terms, longer than any other statewide elected official in Idaho history. He was attending a national conference in Boston on Friday and was unavailable for comment about Van Engelen's potential candidacy. No one opposed Williams during the last election.

"The prime reason I'm thinking about running is that I think the office can be handled in better ways," Van Engelen said.

He said the state auditor's job breaks into three major categories:

bookkeeping, data processing and pre-audit work.

As far as bookkeeping, Joe Williams does a fantastic job for Idaho, Van Engelen said. Under order (former Gov. Cecil Andrus, the auditor became responsible for data processing, using the state's centralized computer. It's been done poorly, if at all, and expensive at that.

As an example, the senator said he's been told the governor's staff was considering purchasing its own computer because the costs of tying into the central computer were too prohibitive.

"That kind of thing simply is not supposed to be necessary. The point of having a central computer was for the state to save money," he said.

Van Engelen said the auditor's office also fails to serve as a warning system for when bill payments aren't matching approved budgets.

"I believe this function is all part of the pre-audit work, but Joe's office doesn't do it," he said. "We (state legislators) don't find out about these problems until a couple years down the road."

Van Engelen already has discussed his potential candidacy with Republican gubernatorial candidates Phil Batt and Ralph Olmstead, "and both encouraged me to seriously consider a campaign."

"Basically, the office needs an administrator type of person," said Van Engelen, who is the sole stockholder of Van Engelen's Inc., a Burley department store. "No single person is going to be a computer expert, bookkeeper and auditor rolled in one."

"My background is in business, and my (college) degree is in business administration, so I think I'm well qualified for the auditor's role."

Serving his third term in the Senate, Van Engelen is the third ranking Republican on both the finance and the commerce and labor committees.

Dog food plant owner will appeal lawsuit

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Nick Rokich, the owner of Big Nick's, claims politics is behind a court case that resulted in his conviction Wednesday on five counts of creating a public nuisance.

In an interview Friday, Rokich said he is going to appeal the judgment in district court and to the Idaho Supreme Court, if necessary.

Rokich maintains that the suit was motivated by Leonard King, a city councilman. Rokich said there has been "bad blood" between himself and King for six years, caused in part by an election campaign he ran against King.

Rokich said he has several lawsuits of his own pending, dealing with civil rights and malice.

"This is going to be a big case," Rokich said. "It's not going to stop here."

King, however, denies that the case is politically motivated.

"The only reason I'm doing it, is that I'm the city councilman for the area, and people asked me to look into it," King said. "I didn't even hear that he campaigned against me until the trial. That—the election—was four years ago."

King said that neither he nor his wife had carried a petition against Rokich's business, nor had they signed one.

Rokich was found guilty by a jury in magistrate court on five counts of creating a public nuisance by "producing an odor from his business operation that was grossly offensive to the senses."

He said his appeal will be based on negative pretrial publicity and the fact that his legal defense was damaged when he was not granted a trial delay. With more time, he said, he would have been able to prove favorable statements made by several police officers who visited his business, and more importantly, he would have been able to call more witnesses.

Rokich said that if he had had sufficient time, he would have called at least 20 witnesses. Nuisance suits are based almost entirely on witnesses' subjective testimony, Rokich said.

"It's a very nebulous thing—how much do you smell?" he said. The state had 25 witnesses at the trial.

Rokich, who handled his own defense, called four witnesses.

According to Rokich, his business is not a dog food production, as has been reported in the media. It is a human nutrition and dog research. Some dog-food supplement is made at the site he said.

The supplement is made mainly from ground fish waste and some animal fat, he said, but no carcasses are used.

"Our business is on a real small scale," Rokich said, explaining that any odor at the site would not carry more than 100 yards. "There's not more than 600 to 900 pounds of material on the property at one time."

Rokich said that the odor attributed to his establishment could have been caused by dead animal carcasses dumped in an adjacent field, or even by the complaining neighborhood itself. The neighborhood, he said, has the poorest sanitation service in the city.

He said the odor problems were exaggerated when summer temperatures got into the 80s.

No one, except Leonard King, complained to him about odors, Rokich said, until the complaint that resulted in the court cases.

"Any odor on our place could have been cleaned up in 20 minutes," he said.

Jaren Tolman, a board of health specialist, said Friday that lacking warrants to go onto private property, he was never able to determine exactly from where the odor was coming. Residents in the neighborhood testified the trial that the odor was from Big Nick's.

Tolman was not aware of any unusual amount of animal carcass dumping in the adjacent field, but he said that it was an isolated area and dumping was possible.

Tolman also said that although he did not see an unusual amount of flies on his visit to Rokich's business, he felt that a potential for a health problem does exist at the site.

Rokich was breeding flies for research in an "unscreened situation," Tolman said, producing a potential for a health hazard.

Mayor Chuck Shaddock says that all neighborhoods in the city receive equal sanitation services, and the waste containers are emptied twice a week. The neighborhood doesn't have an unusual amount of complaints about garbage service, he said.

Kimberly's Chamber sets Halloween plans

KIMBERLY — Plans for the annual Halloween parade were made at a Kimberly Chamber of Commerce meeting this week.

The parade will form Saturday, Oct. 31, at 4:30 p.m. on the baseball diamond at the city park. Costume-judging will begin at 4:45, and the parade will then proceed down Main Street to the grade school parking lot, where prizes will be awarded and refreshments served.

A total of $80 in prize money will be awarded to the top three winners in each of the eight costume categories.

The categories are: witches and devils; ghosts and goblins; fairy tales; cowboys and Indians; TV and storybooks; space age; monsters; and animals.

The chamber anticipates that approximately 300 children will participate in the parade.

Investors cautious on savings plan

TWIN FALLS — Investors played a waiting game in Twin Falls the past two days with the new All-Savers certificates.

They were cautious Thursday about the certificates, which feature up to $1,000 of interest — or $2,000 for a husband and wife — that's exempt from federal income tax. But Friday was a busy day at Twin Falls banks and savings and loans because the yield on the certificates fell from 12.61 percent to 12.14 percent beginning Monday.

Steve Houston, the manager of the Twin Falls branch of Idaho Bank and Trust, said only one or two All-Savers certificates were sold at his bank

Thursday. Employees at the bank advised customers to wait until the rate for next week was announced, so they could choose whether to buy a certificate this week or next.

Friday was busy all day, he said.

Rick Allen, the senior vice president at First Federal Savings and Loan, said that was the biggest savings day there in a long time.

At Equitable Savings and Loan, branch manager J.D. "Pete" Youngberg had to answer phones much of the day so his employees could wait on customers. Some people waited in line 45 minutes to buy a certificate, he said.

Equitable also will be open today from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., the only local financial institution to do so. Officials for the Portland-based company gambled that the rates on the certificates would drop.

By planning several weeks ago to keep its offices open today, Equitable can offer savers one more chance to purchase a certificate at the higher rate.

The rate on the certificates, which is computed from the interest paid on Treasury bills, will not be adjusted again for another month, when the next auction of Treasury bills is held.

State unemployment rises

BOISE (UPI) — After two months of experiencing a decrease in Idaho's unemployment rate, the trend was broken in September with an increase of seven-tenths of a percent over the August level.

"The projected unemployment rate for last month had been set at 7.2 percent," said Scott McDonald, director of the Idaho Department of Employment. "This compares with the figure of 6.5 percent unemployment in August and 7 percent for September of last year."

The number of persons unemployed increased by 3,200 to 30,600 from August's figures. The increase in the number of unemployed primarily was the result of layoffs in the lumber industry, McDonald said.

Layoffs at Bunker-Hill Co. in Kellogg were not included in the survey because they did not begin until after the reporting period ended, he said.

Newspaper-in-schools workshop set

TWIN FALLS — A workshop to instruct teachers in how to use newspapers in the classroom will be offered this month by the continuing education division of Idaho State University.

Activities and teaching strategies for both elementary and secondary levels will be covered in the two-credit hour course.

Enrollment is limited, and the $85 fee must be paid by Oct. 14.

The workshop will be held at the ISU Resident Center in Twin Falls, 140 Second St. E. Class sessions will be held on Oct. 16, 17 and 30, and Nov. 6, 7, 20, and 21. Friday classes will meet from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., while Saturday classes will run from 9 a.m. until noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

To enroll in the course or for more information, call Marge Slotten at the resident center, 734-6931, or Kay Jones at The Times-News, 734-6931.

QUESTION...

Is there someone in attendance at White Mortuary all of the time?

ANSWER...

Since we started serving the people in Magic Valley over 60 years ago, there has never been a time when we have not had thoroughly qualified, personal on duty in our funeral home. Staffing our funeral home around the clock every day of the year with competent people is our sincerest pledge to the residents of Twin Falls and the surrounding communities.

Because of our continuous readiness to serve, it is not always possible for each of our personnel always to be available. Should you call for any of us and we are temporarily unavailable you can be secure in the knowledge that our associates are equally capable and will always have the same personal interest in your welfare that we would have.

Correction

GOODING — The Times-News incorrectly reported in Thursday's edition that the grand prize of the Harvest Days celebration Ping Pong ball drop would be $200 in cash. The grand prize, contained in one of approximately 250 balls dropped over the city Friday, was worth $200 in cash and merchandise.

Kimball unable to attend 151st LDS conference

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Mormons from throughout the world gathered for the opening of their region's 151st semiannual general conference today, but Church President Spencer W. Kimball was unable to attend because complications following skull surgery kept him hospitalized.

Kimball's first counselor, N. Eldon Tanner, was scheduled to preside over the conference, which concludes Sunday on the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square.

General sessions of the conference are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. each day. In addition, a general welfare services session was set for 7 a.m. while a general priesthood session was set for 7 p.m. The church did not schedule a meeting of its regional representatives for this conference gathering.

Kimball was listed in serious but improving condition Friday. He developed gastrointestinal hemorrhaging this week but the bleeding was controlled, his doctors said.

The 86-year-old church leader underwent surgery Sept. 5 to remove blood, fluid and tissue from between his skull and brain, the site of two previous surgeries for a subdural hematoma.

Church spokesman Don Lefevre said Kimball would watch the conference on television in his room at LDS Hospital.

The spokesman said the Saturday night priesthood conference would be carried live via closed-circuit systems to some 2,350 Mormon gatherings in the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Korea and the Philippines.

a family potluck on Thursday Oct. 8 at 6:30 p.m.

Mavuva, the mother of eight children, is a home economics teacher and a member of the Vashandiri — (Women of God), a para-professional group of church workers in her native land.

TWIN FALLS — Hal and Mark Nelson, Shari and Slaci Smith and David Newcomb, youth of the Valley Christian Church will speak during youth Sunday observance. Following the 10:45 a.m. service they will provide a gratitude brunch and show slides of their visit to five Mediterranean countries.

TWIN FALLS — "Image Of The Beast" will be shown tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts at the College of Southern Idaho.

The film, sponsored by the Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls, is a 90-minute drama of the experience of living during the tribulation.

TWIN FALLS — An ecumenical youth gathering for a 30-hour fast for CROP will be held Oct. 9 and 10.

The fast will begin at 6 p.m. Friday at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension and continue until midnight Saturday.

Sponsors will pledge an amount for each hour of the fast. Pledges will be contributed to hunger relief and agricultural development.

Area youth participating will learn about world hunger through films and discussions. For more information, call 733-3789.

TWIN FALLS — Robbie Skaggs, teacher and missionary at the Bongolo School in Gabon, West Africa, will speak at the annual missionary convention of The Christian And Missionary Alliance Church in the Boy Scout Center at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4, 5 and 6 and in Rupert at 8 p.m. Oct. 7.

Miss Skaggs will speak on the challenge of teaching and being a parent for missionaries' children.

Petition drive seeks to halt sale of silver

KELLOGG (UPI) — A state task force Friday launched a petition drive designed to convince President Reagan to call off the sale of the nation's strategic stockpile of silver.

Dale Lavigne, chairman of the Silver Valley Task Force, said backers of the drive hoped to collect several thousand signatures by Oct. 9. He said that would give the group enough time to forward the petition to Reagan before the proposed sale of several million ounces of silver is carried out Oct. 14.

The petition was sponsored by John Evans and members of Idaho's congressional delegation. Lavigne said business associations had agreed to circulate the petition in northern Idaho, eastern Washington and western Montana.

Lavigne, noting 40 percent of the silver produced in the U.S. came from Idaho mines, said the proposed federal silver sale — meant to help reduce the federal budget deficit — could depress the price of silver and lead to the closure of some Idaho mines.

Depressed metals prices were a major factor in the announced closure of Bunker Hill Co., Kellogg, Lavigne said. The task force, appointed by Evans, has been seeking to find a buyer for the lead, zinc and silver mine and smelter complex since the closure was announced Aug. 25 by Gulf Resources & Chemical Co., Houston, Texas.

Lavigne also said the government silver sale "could be a major deterrent" influencing any potential buyers of the Bunker Hill facility.

SEN. JAMES MCCLURE
In best interests of U.S.

McClure: Sell the AWACS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The sale of five AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia would be in the best interests of the United States, and that should be the primary issue faced by senators considering the proposed arms deal, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Friday.

McClure said he supported President Reagan's plan to sell the planes to the Mideast nation and believed the deal would not jeopardize the security of Israel, while solidifying U.S. relations with the Saudis.

But he also said, "Any decision in foreign policy must be made on the basis of what is best for the United States. Not what's best for Saudi Arabia, not what's best for Israel, but what is in the best interests of this country."

"Using that criteria, the sale of five early warning radar-planes—the AWACS—is clearly in the best interests of this country," the Idaho senator said. He said Saudi possession of the sophisticated aircraft would help them prevent "surprise attacks against their vast oil reserves — one quarter of the world's deposits."

And he said senators, who will vote on the proposed arms sale Oct. 31, should remember that Saudi Arabia provides the United States with 25 percent of its crude oil imports.

"For the economic, military and political well-being of the U.S. and the entire West, it's vital that the production of oil from Saudi Arabia is not disrupted in any way. The AWACS planes, in effect, serve as an insurance policy which will enhance the security and stability of Saudi Arabia, of the Middle East, and of the West in general," McClure said.

Supporters of Reagan's proposal face an uphill fight in gaining Senate approval. A resolution opposing the sale, and signed by 50 senators — only one short of a majority — was presented Thursday by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore.

Zinc plant proposal abandoned

WALLACE (UPI) — The Shoshone County Economic Development Committee tentatively has abandoned plans for encouraging the development of a zinc galvanizing plant in the Wallace area.

The $2½ million-$3 million plant, which has been studied under a $15,000 grant from the state, would serve steel fabricators in northern Idaho, eastern and central Washington and western Montana.

Although consultants in the study predicted a bright future for the zinc galvanizing industry because of population and industrial shifts to Western states, they said Shoshone County was not the best possible location for such a plant.

One consultant said it would be easy for another galvanizer to locate in eastern Washington — closer to primary suppliers and markets — and "pick off" the business.

Owes other state agencies

Department of Law Enforcement bills unpaid

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Law Enforcement owes three other state agencies about $791,000 because of unpaid bills left over from the 1980-81 fiscal year, department officials say.

The bills were purposely left unpaid after revenues from state automobile registrations fell short of original projections.

Idaho Department Director Kelly Pearce said holdbacks in spending were initiated in the fall of 1980 in an attempt to balance the department budget but that the holdbacks were not sufficient to meet reduced revenues.

The drop in revenue was discovered and the spending holdback initiated while the department was directed by Pearce, who resigned Sept. 1 to run for the Boise mayor's job in the Nov. 3 city election.

The department decided to carry over the debts into the 1981-82 fiscal year rather than make even deeper cuts in programs, Pearce said. The 1981-82 fiscal year started July 1.

Law Enforcement Department figures show a debt of $430,000 to the Idaho Department of Transportation for gasoline to run state police cars, for computer services and for building rent. The two departments share the same building in Boise.

The Department of Administration is owed $286,000 for telephone charges and maintenance of radio equipment. The Department of Corrections has $75,000 coming to it for license plates manufactured by inmates at the Idaho State Penitentiary.

A repayment schedule has been set up for each department — and those

Ex-con uses new law to run for office

POST-FALLS (UPI) — A man who served more than 4½ years in California's San Quentin Penitentiary and who has past ties with a white supremacy group is exercising his right under a new Idaho law to run for public office.

Keith Gilbert, a 41-year-old ex-convict who is now an unemployed carpenter, is one of three men vying for two openings on the Post Falls City Council.

In 1966, Gilbert was convicted of receiving stolen property — explosives — and assault with a deadly weapon in Los Angeles County. He served his time in the California prison system from Sept. 3, 1966 to June 1, 1971.

Gilbert also acknowledges that he has attended "a number of meetings" at the Aryan Nations headquarters in Hayden. Aryan Nations, headed by Richard Butler, is known to be a staunch racist, white supremacy group which lauds the teaching of Adolf Hitler.

Gilbert is currently suing Butler and the Aryan Nations for libel but he admits that he has known Butler for a long time. In fact, he said they both attended the same church — in California for a number of years.

But Gilbert doesn't feel his past has anything to do with his qualifications for public office.

"I don't think this issue enters into the question of whether I'm qualified or would make the best city councilman," Gilbert said. "It only reflects the mistakes of my youth."

Gilbert, by penal records, was 29 years old at the time of his conviction. However, according to a new Idaho law, which went into effect July 1, Gilbert's right to run is legally restored.

The statute reads: "Upon the final discharge of a person convicted of any felon except treason, a person shall be restored the full rights of citizenship. As used in this subsection, 'final discharge' means satisfactory completion of probation and parole as the case may be."

The law restores all civil rights to a felon, including ability to vote and hold public office.

The Idaho attorney general's office is shocked by the law.

"This would probably boggle the minds of a lot of law enforcement people... and people not in law enforcement for that matter," said Mike Kennedy, deputy attorney general.

"I don't know where this law came

Craig blasts House deductions bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A resolution that gave House members unlimited expense deductions in return for attack from Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

The resolution, which Craig said was passed by the House Wednesday night under "slick maneuvers" by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and congressmen from both parties, was "a political travesty of the worst kind."

Craig said as a result he would introduce legislation to reverse the action and clearly limit the deductions a congressman may take.

"Some of the two-faced double talk that comes out of this city irritates the hell out of me," Craig said. "How do they expect people to tighten their belts when Congress pulls a stunt like this?"

Prison medical officer resigns after death of epileptic inmate

BOISE (UPI) — One of the medical officers responsible for giving medication to an epileptic inmate at the Idaho State Penitentiary has resigned amid the furor over the prisoner's death two months ago.

Ray Beeman, a correctional medical assistant at the Idaho Security Medical Facility, resigned following the death of Lonnie Sorenson, 42, who suffered an apparent seizure and died of respiratory arrest at the facility July 24.

An investigation by the Ada County Coroner's Office found that Beeman had negligently failed to make a written record of Sorenson's medication.

Sorenson had not received his epilepsy medication the day before his death, prison officials have said.

Citing a "gag order" on the case imposed by the state Corrections Department, George Miller, administrator of the facility, would not say whether Beeman's resignation was forced or whether it was related to Sorenson's death.

Beeman could not be located for comment.

According to the report on Sorenson's death by the coroner's office, Miller stated that Beeman did not follow written procedures in giving medication to Sorenson and resigned shortly afterwards.

Chief Deputy Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg, who conducted the investigation, said Beeman knew that he was required to make a written record of Sorenson's medication but did not.

"That was negligence on Beeman's part," Sonnenberg said.

However, Sonnenberg said Sorenson may have in part brought the fatal seizure on himself.

"I feel confident in saying I don't believe he was taking his medication while he was in the (Ada County) jail," he said.

Sorenson was in Ada County Jail from December 1980 until July 20. He was transferred to the prison to serve a 15-year sentence for a drug store robbery.

His family has filed a $2-million lawsuit against the state, charging that Sorenson should not have died and that the facility officers were negligent.

Tuition recommendation criticized

MOSCOW (UPI) — A University of Idaho student leader Friday attacked several state legislators for recommending consideration of a resolution that would allow tuition to be charged at Idaho colleges and universities.

Eric Stoddard, student president at the Moscow university, blasted members of an interim committee that last week voted to forward a tuition measure to the 1982 Legislature. Singled out for criticism by Stoddard were Rep. Dan Kelly, R-Mountain Home, chairman of the committee; plus three other Republicans, David Little of Emmett, Kathleen Gurnsey of Boise and Kurt Johnson of Idaho Falls.

Stoddard, noting he was a member of the Young Republicans group, accused the lawmakers of betraying Republican Party principles.

"To give the Idaho State Legislature authority to set tuition or fee levels, rather than allowing each local college or university to set those levels as it now exists, is inconsistent with the Republican political philosophy," Stoddard said.

"What Representative Kelly is proposing on the state level with student fees and tuition is like subsidizing Social Security with the federal general budget," the U of I leader said.

He said Idaho lawmakers were doing what he claimed Washington state legislators did recently: Order a large tuition increase not to improve education — but to aid the state's beleaguered budget.

Stoddard said many college students in Idaho went along with a $200 fee increase for the 1981-82 academic year, but he said he and other student officials opposed any proposals to enact a tuition measure through a state constitutional amendment.

"I find it ironic that some legislators, many of whom were educated in the state of Idaho at a reasonable cost, now turn around after they have received their education and tell the students of today, 'Tough luck, you're going to have to pay for yours.'"

Investigators probe cause of fatal blaze

BOISE (UPI) — A smoking fire which killed a middle-aged couple was apparently the result of human carelessness or was deliberately set, Boise Fire Marshal Dean Goodner said Friday.

Goodner said investigators have ruled out the possibility that the blaze was spontaneous or the result of malfunctioning household equipment. "That leaves us with either a careless act or a deliberately set fire."

Investigators were called into the case as the possibility grew that an arsonist might have triggered the blaze.

The fire resulted in the fatal burning of Bill Holt, 54, and his wife, Joanne, 50. The two died early Friday after being transported to the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City. One sleeping in the home was not injured.

According to Goodner, the couple was apparently awakened shortly before midnight by the fire. He said the entire hallway leading from their bedroom was aflame, and Holt broke out a bedroom window and leaped to the ground.

His wife apparently ran into a nearby bathroom and attempted to escape through another window. She was unconscious when rescued by fire fighters.

Lawyer convicted of fraud

Creer to advise on prisons

FARMINGTON, Utah (UPI) — Lawyer John Preston Creer, given a 30-day sentence for mishandling a Utah power and light Co. campaign contribution fund, will serve the remainder of his jail term in Davis County so he can advise the Utah Sheriff's Association on its jail guidelines.

Creer was moved from the Summit County Jail in Coalville to the Davis County Jail in Farmington Thursday. The move was made at the request of Davis County Sheriff Brant Johnson, president of the sheriff's association. Johnson said Creer would review the association's manual on jail standards and policies to determine whether it should be modified. The manual is checked each year to make sure it meets constitutional standards set down by the courts.

The manual is used by sheriff's in all 29 Utah counties to make sure their jails are operated within the latest legal guidelines.

Johnson said he asked to have Creer moved to Farmington so that the association could benefit from the advice of a lawyer in reviewing the manual. Johnson said Creer would be given no special privileges.

Creer began serving his sentence Wednesday in the Summit County Jail. He pleaded guilty last month in Salt Lake County's Third District Court to misdemeanor charges in connection with his handling of $193,000 in UP&L political campaign money.

The complaint to which Creer pleaded guilty said he converted $65,000 to his own use.

Creer was initially given permission to serve his sentence in Summit County rather than Salt Lake County so that he could avoid the overcrowded conditions in the Salt Lake County Jail.

Montana AG says justice system is failing; issues call for reforms

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — Montana Attorney General Mike Greely said Friday it's time to recognize the fact that Montana's criminal justice system is failing.

He called for mobilization of "criminal justice constituencies," public and private, to push for changes in existing laws and write new laws to reform the system.

At the top of his list of reform legislation is a proposal rejected by the legislature earlier this year to create a state district attorney system. Such a system, he said, would reduce the total cost of prosecutions and extend professional prosecutorial services to all areas of the state, both urban and rural.

The state should pay the cost of training local police and sheriff's officers, Greely added, and said Montana needs improved and expanded scientific criminal investigations along with a statewide law enforcement radio communications system.

There's also a need for coordination and cooperation among all law enforcement agencies, federal, state and local.

Greely said state courts are among the most prominent signs of failure of Montana's criminal justice system. They are "ready to cave in," clogged with old cases and confronting an avalanche of new ones.

He also referred to "unequal quality of prosecutions throughout the state," as another sign of failure of the system, and noted that prosecutors in Montana cities are "under-staffed, overworked and underpaid."

Boeing loses $10 billion on MX

SEATTLE (UPI) — President Reagan's reported decision Friday to scrap the controversial MX missile "shell game" design would mean the loss of a potential $10 billion contract for the Boeing Co. over the next 10 years.

Members of Congress reported Reagan's decision shortly before the President's scheduled news conference in the nation's capital.

Boeing officials, shocked by the news, declined immediate comment. The Carter Administration in 1977 awarded Boeing a $300 million design contract for the controversial ground system for the MX, which involved deploying 200 missiles scattered among 4,600 shelters buried beneath the Utah and Nevada desert.

The missiles were to have been transported irregularly between the shelters to confuse potential enemy attacks. The shelters without real missiles were to contain simulated missiles.

Boeing was to have built the simulated missiles, the transporters, the shelters, the security system around each shelter and the roads between the shelters, said Don Brannon, a spokesman for the aerospace firm.

Brannon said the contract could have involved up to $10 billion over the next decade and employed some 8,000 workers at the company's Kent, Wash., facilities.

Postal rate hike stalls new stamp release

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The anticipation of a new 39-cent postage stamp has put a crimp in postal officials' plans to introduce a new set of commemorative stamps in Tucson.

The four "Desert Plants" commemorative stamps were to have been issued in Tucson Oct. 23, but printing had not begun when U.S. Postal Service officials announced the new stamp rate Wednesday. Printing of new stamps usually starts about two months prior to the first day of issue.

The price of a first-class stamp will increase two cents, beginning Nov. 1. The new postage costs mark the first time that the Postal Service Board of Governors has hiked costs without the approval of the independent Postal Rate Commission.

Postal Service officials have decided to delay the first day of issue of the desert plants series until next December, to allow time for printers to change the face of the stamp to reflect the new rate.

Although the dies have been cast on the new stamp, the costs of changing the price will be minimal, said Dickey Rustin, Philatelic Program Specialist for the U.S. Postal Service in Washington.

World's heaviest man hospitalized

SEATTLE (UPI) — The world's heaviest man, who once weighed 1,400 pounds, was in intensive care today suffering from heart trouble and uncontrollable weight gains.

Jon B. Minnoch, 40, the heaviest man in recorded history when he weighed an estimated 1,400 pounds in 1978, was listed in serious condition at University Hospital, spokeswoman Barbara Battino said.

He was not actually in the hospital's intensive care unit but was placed in an adjacent area where intensive care nurses could attend him. Ms. Battino could not say whether Minnoch was too large to be taken into the intensive care rooms.

"Mr. Minnoch is with us again," she said. "He is being treated for suspected heart failure and edema" — the retention of body fluids.

The 6-foot-1 Minnoch shed about 900 pounds after he entered the hospital on the brink of death three years ago. Attendants placed him on a 1,200-calorie-a-day diet and after 16 months of intensive care, he went home.

But this week, emergency crews were called again and 10 men carried Minnoch from his house in Seattle to a waiting ambulance. To extricate him from the house required removal of several doors.

Doctors would not disclose his current weight, but a spokesman for the Fire Department said Minnoch was thought to have gained about 200 pounds within the last week.

Listed in the Guinness Book of Records as the heaviest man in recorded history according to a doctor's estimate, Minnoch weighed more than 1,400 pounds when he was hospitalized in 1978, his doctors said.

When he left the hospital in 1979, Minnoch was down to 475 pounds. The loss of about 900 pounds was believed to be another record.

Plagued by obesity from childhood, Minnoch was a taxicab driver on Bainbridge Island in Puget Sound before being immobilized by his weight three years ago, to the point of being virtually trapped in his house.

WHAT THESE CHILDREN DON'T KNOW COULD HURT THEM

Textbooks teach children many valuable lessons. But there's more to learn and understand about living in the world than most textbooks teach. Students may learn how to add and subtract from their textbooks, but those books don't teach them how to buy a car wisely or plan a nutritious, inexpensive meal for a family of four. Textbooks may teach students the facts about the development of our economic system, but those books don't often help students understand why that same family of four is having trouble making ends meet on a salary of $20,000 today.

Using the newspaper as a supplemental teaching tool can go a long way in helping students to translate what they learn in their textbooks into what's going on in the world right now. Newspaper In Education programs can provide the vital link between theory and reality, a link that students need to make their lessons come alive.

Wall Street scores 5th gain in row, closes strong week

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, hoping inflation and interest rates would decline soon as the economy slows, scored its fifth successive gain Friday while wrapping up its best week in seven months.

The trading pace on all markets picked up, thanks to increased activity of institutions which had stayed on the sidelines during a three-month price slide.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, a 2.28-point winner Thursday, tacked on 6.47 points to 880.73, bringing its advance for the week to 38.72 points as President Reagan's economic program went into effect.

The weekly gain was the best since the Dow rose 38.49 points in the period ended Feb. 27, right after Reagan formally unveiled his program of tax and budget cuts, and business incentives.

The New York Stock Exchange index jumped 1.36 to 68.86 and the price of an average share increased 5 cents. Advances routed declines, 1,269-316, among the 1,660 issues traded.

Big Board volume climbed to 54,540,000 shares from 41,600,000 traded Tuesday, indicating institutions were beginning to come-off the sidelines by following the market's severe third-quarter plunge.

Some selling was noted toward the close of the session, but brokers generally said signs the economy is declining because of stock and bond investors because a slowdown could cause inflation and interest rates to decline in the near future.

Observers said some investors speculated the Federal Reserve would report a decline in the nation's money supply after the NYSE closed.

So it did — a slide of $1.9 billion that surpassed many experts' forecasts.

Wall Street, rightly or wrongly, looks at these figures to guess where interest rates may be headed.

The market appeared to pick up some strength late Thursday after President Reagan pledged to stick by his economic program and know down interest rates through reduced federal spending.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 62,502,400 shares compared with 47,945,600 traded Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index soared 7.67 to 307.67 and the price of a share jumped 37 cents. Advances topped declines, 462-144, among the 759 issues traded. Volume totaled 5,180,000 shares compared with 4,430,000 Thursday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of over the counter stocks gained 3.28 to 184.37.

On the trading floor, Rockwell International, the prime contractor for the B-1 bomber, gained 1 1/2 to 31 1/2 in active trading. President Reagan declared Friday to develop a new generation of B-1s to replace the aging B-52.

Among the other defense and related issues, Litton Industries rose 2 1/2 to 58, Teledyne 2 1/2 to 136 and Raytheon 2 1/2 to 39 1/2.

Crocker National, trading for the first time since Wednesday, plunged 6 1/2 to 34 1/2.

Porsche raises prices

DETROIT (UPI) — Volkswagen of America announced price increases Friday averaging 1.7 percent for imported 1982 Porsche sports cars and 4 percent for 1982 Audi vehicles.

The company said increased costs for production, distribution and materials made a price increase necessary. The action also reflects higher levels of trim and equipment on the 1982 cars, it said.

A Volkswagen spokesman acknowledged, however, the importer has benefitted from favorable international currency exchange rates. A stronger U.S. dollar tends to reduce the price of imports.

That situation is helping hold price increases down, the company said. Steeper prices of Audis increased an average of 6.8 percent in the 1981 model year, while Porsche prices went up 2.4 percent last year.

Introductory 1982 price increases ranged from 5.9 percent on the Audi 4000, which has a new base price of $9,786, to 9 percent for the Audi 5000 Turbo, which goes up to $18,490.

The price of the Porsche 924 Turbo remained at the 1981 level of $21,500, while a 911 Coupe increased 1.9 percent to $28,900 and the top-of-the-line Porsche 928 went up 1.7 percent to $39,500.

The key evidence seemed to be the admission by Auerbach that the Celtics were notified last February and June that Ainge was Toronto property and had a no-basketball clause in his contract. Auerbach said that the notices were delivered to him, but he only glanced at them and turned them over to his lawyers.

Twenty electric fans raised the roof on Minneapolis' new domed sports complex

Inflation

Electric fans blow Metrodome roof into place

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A festive crowd of champagne-sipping observers Friday watched the inflation of the cloth and cable roof of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome. The stadium will be ready for the opening of the Minnesota Twins' baseball season next spring.

Ray Rivard, 58, a steelworker from St. Paul, was among them.

"It works," he said. "There was a element of doubt, even by those guys who put it together."

Construction beneath the 310-ton, fiberglass and Teflon dome continued during the 90-minute inflation of the roof. The crowd of 400 watched the $5 million roof inflate like a balloon.

Birger Dahlstrom, 66, of Minneapolis, a baseball fan who goes to about eight or nine games a year, said he would attend games at the new stadium.

"Now I can make a bus, take one chute to the stadium," he said. "I've been looking forward to this for several years."

Dahlstrom was not among the invited guests for the roof inflation, but he got inside briefly until he was asked to leave by a guard.

"It's wonderful," he said. "It gives old folks a chance to come to the game and not worry about the weather."

Unlike the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., the Metrodome has two layers of roof material — one to hold out the weather and a second inside layer used to direct hot air to the roof to melt ice and snow.

The $52.8 million stadium has a height of 186 feet, about 20 feet lower than the Astrodome in Houston and the Silverdome.

The stadium should be completed before the baseball opening in April, said Don Pess, executive director of the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission, the group created by the Minnesota Legislature to build the 60,000-seat structure that replaces the 48,000-seat Met Stadium in suburban Bloomington.

Golf

Colbert's 64 good for lead at 52nd annual Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Jim Colbert took advantage of ideal weather Friday to record one of the four 64s shot during the day and moved into a first-place tie with opening-round leader Craig Stadler midway through the 52nd annual Texas Open.

Colbert made four straight birdies starting at the 5th hole of the short but tricky Oak Hills Country Club course to register a 36-hole total of 10-under, 130.

Stadler, who had opened the tournament with a 63 Thursday, survived a poor driving round to shoot a 67 Friday, but a crowd of veteran golfers were close behind.

Colbert said consistency and a good driver were the keys to his 64.

"I did two things today that every golf pro likes to do," he said. "I didn't make any 5's and I didn't make make any bogey."

The swarthy Stadler, enjoying his finest year on the tour, survived what he said could have been a bad day. "I drove the ball off an ugly par round. But I made some birdies along the way."

Jim Thorpe, who led the opening round of this year's U.S. Open, also recorded a 64 Thursday to bring him to within two shots of the leaders. Texans Ben Crenshaw and Charles Coody tied Thorpe at 132 after both shooting 3-under 67s Friday.

Those at 133 included Bobby Clampett, Tommy Valentino, Wayne Levi, Bob Eastwood and British Open champ Bill Rogers. Another shot back were Don Levin, Tim Simpson and Roger Maltbie.

Defending champion Lee Trevino, who was in danger of missing the cut after an opening round 71, fought back with another of the 64's to stand at 5-under-par for two rounds. Bruce Lietzke, who started the day a shot behind Stadler, birdied the first three holes Friday but he faltered the rest of the way, shot a 1-over 71 and finished tied with Trevino at 135.

Leading money winner and the Vardon Trophy leader Tom Kite shot the cut. He was six shots behind the front runners but appeared to be in good shape to retain both the money and Vardon leads.

The only challenger to Kite's money leadership entered in this week's event is Lietzke and he would have to win $20,000 more than Kite to surpass him in the race for the money title.

Callison, McAllister out in front

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Veterans Carole Jo Callison and Susie McAllister fired a 7-under-par 66 Friday to take first-round lead in the LPGA Portland Ping team championship golf tournament.

Callison and McAllister had a 7-under-par 66 Friday to take first-round lead in the LPGA Portland Ping team championship golf tournament.

Donna Caponi and Kathy Whitworth. Three other teams were two shots off the pace.

Callison, a native Oregonian, scored five of the team's eight birdies but a bogie at 18 prevented them from opening a two-shot lead. Callison, the former Carole Jo Skala who remarried earlier this year, was deadly with her putter, getting three birdies from 15 feet, another from 25 feet and one from 3 feet.

She credited her husband-caddy,

Verne, a former U.S. Public Links and California amateur champion, with helping her read the greens.

Most of the players in the 41-team lineup said the Riverside Golf and Country Club course was playing longer than last year due to recent rains. However, Callison said the greens "still are lightning fast."

The leaders had 34 on both sides while the Caponi-Whitworth duo played the course in 33-34.

Teams at 68 were Cindy Chamberlain and Cathy Morse, Dianne Bailey and Alexandra Reinhardt and Debbie Massey and Sandra Palmer. Seven teams were at 4-under and five others were 3-under. In all, 30 teams broke par 73 on the 6,303-yard layout.

Palmer and Massey agreed the course was playing longer than a year ago, but like most of the players found it difficult to predict what score will win the tournament.

Caponi and Whitworth set a record last year with three consecutive rounds of 65 to finish 24-under and Palmer said, "I don't think that 24-under will be threatened this year."

Rain fell intermittently Friday afternoon on the late starters, but Callison and McAllister said the rain did not hamper play as it made the greens hold better.

U.S. takes 2-0 Davis Cup lead

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — John McEnroe ripped Mark Edmondson 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 and Roscoe Tanner outlasted Peter McNamara 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, 6-2 Friday to give the United States a commanding 2-0 lead over Australia in their Davis Cup semifinal series.

McEnroe's victory in the opening match was expected, but the Australians desperately needed a win from McNamara on the opening day to have any realistic chance of upsetting the U.S.

Tanner, the 29-year-old left-hander whose serve is generally regarded as the hardest in the game, was a late replacement for Jimmy Connors, who bowed out citing a prior commitment. The best-of-five series continues today with McEnroe and Peter Fleming facing McNamara and Phil Dent in doubles play.

A win would give the U.S. a berth in the Davis Cup finals against the winner of the Great Britain-Argentina semifinal. Argentina took a 2-0 lead Friday in that series, under way in Buenos Aires.

Tanner, who unofficially recorded 19 service aces, seemed to have the match in hand when he broke McNamara early in the first and second sets, holding his own serve to take a 2-0 lead.

But the 26-year-old right-hander from Melbourne stayed alive when, leading 5-4 in the third set, he finally broke Tanner's serve.

McNamara gained momentum in the next set, winning the final three games to take the set 6-3 and even the match at two sets apiece.

Tanner looked even shakier when he double-faulted twice to drop the first game of the deciding set. But with an increasingly vocal and partisan crowd behind him, Tanner rallied to break McNamara in the second and sixth games of the set.

The blond Tennessee ruffled a pair of service aces past a tiring McNamara in two other games to take control of the set.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world after wins earlier this year at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, showcased his tennis ability but relatively little of his equally famous temper in his easy straight set victory.

McEnroe never lost his serve to Edmondson and faced a break point only once in the match, which lasted just under two hours.

In the second match on the opening day of the best-of-five semifinals, Roscoe Tanner of the U.S. faced Peter McNamara, Australia's No. 1 player.

McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world after wins earlier this year at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, never lost his serve in the 1 hour, 49 minute contest.

Edmondson, on the other hand, made serious mistakes that led to a service break in each of the three sets.

Briefly in Sports

Mountain Home group wins scramble

JACKPOT — A Mountain Home foursome combined for 11-under par gross and 40 under net to win the annual Jackpot Mixed Scramble Golf Tournament.

Lee and Shiri Wasmund and Bruce and Ellen Connors wound up with the title at 104 but only two-strokes ahead of two other teams for the two-day match.

Tied for second were Phil and Donna Hyland and Bill and Betty Bowden of Ogden and Bob Scott and Orin Jacobs and Ted and Marne Bladcan.

The second night flight went to the Mountain Home group of Charles and Donna Michaels and George and Susan Bendere at 96. A Jackpot crew of Bob Means and Joann Downs and Mike and Dana McGhee was second at 99.6. Sharing third was the Burley team of Hugo and Irene DalSoglio and Dwain and Jeri Hutchinson and Twin Falls quartet of Ace and Lois Hansen and Nick and Lois Hansen, both at 102.6.

Don and Joann Rogers and Fred and Louisa Nelson of Twin Falls took the biggest win in taking the third flight at 95. Jackpots Bus and Bon Beemer and Linda and Noel Yeary were second at 100.6 while Jack and Margaret Martin and Howard Johnson and Sammi Martin were third with 101.6.

Ketchum beats Bliss 6-0 in soccer

BLISS — Three Ketchum players scored two goals each to lift Ketchum to a 6-0 soccer victory over Bliss.

Jeff Sarchette netted two first-half goals and Michael Tobin and Tim Brown added one each to stake Ketchum to a 4-0 halftime lead. Tobin and Brown also scored in the second half.

Bliss plays again Wednesday at Gooding State.

Andretti claims spot at Watkins Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — Former world driving champion Mario Andretti posted a speed of 58.421 miles per hour over a rainy Watkins Glen road course Friday to take a provisional No. 1 starting spot for Sunday's Watkins Glen 200.

Andretti's speed was more than two mph faster than Al Unser, who checked in at 56.126.

Only 10 cars took to the track for the Friday session, as several teams, including those of CART champion Rick Mears, Bobby Unser and Gordon Johncock elected to stay in the garage hoping for better weather Saturday.

Andretti's speed was posted on the Glen's so-called long course of 3.77 miles, which is being used for the first time by the Indy cars this season.

Lara has strong finish in J Club Invitational

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

JEROME — Minico's Albert Lara proved he won't have much trouble finishing anybody's shoes.

Starting slowly but finishing successfully, Lara won his third consecutive race Friday, capturing the boys' varsity division of the J Club Invitational cross country meet at the Jerome Country Club.

Jerome's boys varsity also continued winning, taking its fourth team title in five meets. The Tigers also won the junior varsity boys' division.

"Twin Falls' girls squads emerged triumphant again, winning both the varsity and junior varsity brackets," Lara covered the 5,000-meter course in 16:28 wearing shoes that weren't his. The blue-gray Nikes covering Lara's limer felt belonged to teammate Max Bean. Lara explained that he wore out a pair of spikes while winning last Thursday's Boise City Invitational and had to search for a replacement.

His search produced pleasurable results.

"These shoes felt so good," the Spartan junior said.

Lara didn't feel so good earlier in the week. Friday he said he had been bothered by slight congestion.

"Each race seems completely different. I didn't know about this one because I wasn't feeling too well earlier," he said.

Once the race began, however, Lara's condition improved immediately. While the other squads broke quickly from the starting line, the Spartans pace resembled that of a showboat baseball player rounding the bases after a home run.

"This weather is perfect," Lara exulted. "Wind and cold, bad weather — that's when we (the Spartans) do best."

Lara and his winter-loving teammates distinguished themselves immediately. While the other squads broke quickly from the starting line, the Spartans pace resembled that of a showboat baseball player rounding the bases after a home run.

"It helps you psychologically," Lara said of the slow start. "Instead of getting passed, you're passing."

STAVEN GREENE/Times News

Minico's Albert Lara receives congratulations after winning the 5,000 meter boys' varsity division cross country race Friday.

Recently Lara has done more passing than all of the NFL's quarterbacks. After beginning the season with fourth- and second-place finishes, he has won three in a row.

Lara has no great secret for his success. "I guess I'm getting used to the pain in races," he said with just a pinch of dry humor.

Racing hasn't been much of a pain for either Jerome's boys or Twin Falls' girls. The Tigers' varsity bested Minico, 26 points to 45, while the junior varsity defeated the Spartans 41 to 45.

The Bruin girls' victories were slightly easier. The varsity bested Jerome 32 to 60 and the junior varsity beat the Tigers 15 to 70.

After Lara crossed the finish line, six of the next nine completing the race were Tiger-runners: Robin Mein (second place), Kurt Foote (fourth), Lance Gines (fifth), Greg Bartholomew (seventh), Barrett Craig (eighth) and Doug Robinson (10th).

Jerome placed four racers among the top 10 junior varsity finishers, with Brian Craig's 18:37 first-place effort leading the way.

Tammy Crow again paced Twin Falls' girls' varsity performance, easily outdistancing Ruthie Mathies of Sun Valley-Ketchum to clock an 11:12 over the 3,000 meters.

Bruins Julie Yergensen (third), Nancy McGinnis (fifth) and Shana Brewer (eighth) also contributed to the team triumph.

The Bruin junior varsity could hardly have been more dominant, taking the top nine places and 11 of the first 12. Tessie Szuebert headed the Twin Falls horde, winning in 12:43.

Boxing

Heavyweight title fight: Unknown vs. mystery

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — The World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight at the Horizon stadium night will match the unknown champion against the mystery challenger.

Mike Weaver is the WBA heavyweight champion but he is a fighter who craves — and gets — anonymity. He owns a rather lackluster record of 24-8 and was stopped in 11 rounds by World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes. Even in the fight in which he won his title, Weaver was trailing badly when he caught John Tate with a savage left hook in the 15th round and knocked him out.

James Tillis is ranked second by the WBA, which comes as somewhat of a surprise to boxing people. The Chicago-based fighter is 20-0, but his victims hardly read like a "Who's Who" of the heavyweight division. His latest victories came against Cookie Wallace, Frank Schlegel, Walter Santore, Eric Sedillo, Mike Koranicki, Domingo D'Elia and Roughhouse Fisher, hardly household names among heavyweight contenders.

The co-feature actually may overshadow the heavyweight title bout. It matches Marvin Hagler, the undisputed world middleweight champion from Brockton, Mass., defending his title against No. 1-ranked Mustafa Hamsho, a rugged native of Syria who now lives in Brooklyn, N.Y.

The fight program, scheduled to start at 7 p.m. EDT, is being televised on cable by Home Box Office.

Weaver actually was forced into the title bout against Tillis. He had signed a lucrative contract to face unbeaten Gerry Cooney, the No. 1 contender. The WBA ruled last June, however, that Weaver's period for a mandatory defense had elapsed and he had to sign to fight the top available contender, who mysteriously turned out to be Tillis.

Weaver will receive $750,000 for the fight, a small sum in comparison to what fighters — especially heavyweights — are making today. "I had no other choice but to take the fight against Tillis," Weaver said. "It's not the fight I wanted, but what can I do? I worked hard to get my title and I just don't want to give it away. The money for fighting Cooney would have been great, but I wanted it to be a championship fight. The money doesn't mean anything if it's not for the championship."

"I'm 29 years old and I don't have too many fights left. I want to beat Tillis, have one other title defense and then fight the Holmes-Cooney winner for the world title."

Holmes and Cooney will fight for the WBC title next March in Las Vegas, Nev. "I expect this to be a tough fight and I expect to win," Weaver said. "I have too much experience for Tillis. He's a good young fighter but he's never faced someone as experienced as me."

The 24-year-old Tillis was raised in Tulsa, Okla., where he worked as a cowboy, and now lives in Chicago. He is trained by Angelo Dundee, who also handles Muhammad Ali and Sugar Ray Leonard.

"I've been fighting just for this shot," Tillis said. "This is what every fighter wants, a title shot. I know I can win. A lot of people say I don't have enough experience, but they said Weaver would never win when he faced Tate and now he's the champion."

"I feel I'm a good fighter and I feel I'm ready to win this fight. I also compete in rodeos and it may sound strange, but my real ambition is to be world heavyweight champion and cowboy champion."

Weaver is considered a slow starter and Tillis' best chance might be to get him early. Weaver will have a six-pound weight advantage. He weighed in at 215 Friday, while Tillis checked in at 209.

The fight will be the 10th heavyweight championship bout in the Chicago area and the first since March 5, 1965, when Ernie Terrell, now a Chicago promoter, won the WBA title with a 15-round decision over Eddie Machen at the International Amphitheatre.

Hagler defends middleweight title

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — There is a certain mystique about Marvin Hagler.

He has a shaven head that projects a sinister look. He is often pictured with a menacing scowl and his elongated body structure makes him appear much taller than his 5-foot-9 height.

But Hagler will need more than mystique at the Horizon Arena tonight when he puts his undisputed world middleweight title on the line against rugged Mustafa Hamsho.

Hamsho, who was born in Syria and now fights out of Brooklyn, N.Y., could be the toughest opponent Hagler has faced in his nine-year pro career.

The fight is a co-feature to the World Boxing Association heavyweight title bout between champion Mike Weaver and James Tillis. It will be televised on cable by Home Box Office starting at 7 p.m. EDT.

Hagler will earn a career-high $1 million for the fight and a victory could project him into the elite club of boxing's multimillionaires. But Hamsho, who is ranked No. 1 and will earn $500,000, won't be a pushover.

Hagler, 29, is 32-2-2 and has not lost since dropping a 10-round decision to Bobby "Boogaboogie" Watts in January, 1976. The only blemish in his 29 fights since then was a 15-round draw with then-champion Vito Antuofermo in November 1979, and he avenged that by stopping Antuofermo in five rounds last May.

Hamsho, who was an amateur champion in Syria, signed on as a first mate on a Greek ship and then "jumped ship" and entered the U.S. as an illegal alien in 1974. He since has resolved his problems with the Immigration Service and now lives in the U.S.

The 27-year-old Hamsho, who began his career fighting under the names of Rocky Estefade and Mike Estefade, is 32-1. He lost a six-round decision to Pat Cullio, a light heavyweight, in his first pro bout in 1975 and has been nearly flawless in the six years since then, averaging a draw with Reggie Jones with a seventh-round TKO in May 1980.

He has beaten several top-ranked middleweights, including Wilford Scypion, Curtis Parker, and Alan Minter, the man Hagler stopped last September to win the middleweight championship, and at one point registered 15 consecutive knockouts.

Hagler, who may be facing the likes of Sugar Ray Leonard, Thomas Hearns, Wilfred Benitez and Roberto Duran in the next year, is supremely confident. He is a 4-1 favorite.

Bears hope national television trouncing trend continues

By IRA KAUFMAN
UPI Sports Writer

Maybe every NFL team could use a nationally televised trouncing once in a while. At least the Chicago Bears hope so.

With Chicago Coach Neil Armstrong starting to feel the heat for a lackluster start, the Bears prepare for Sunday's game in Metropolitan Stadium hoping an early-season NFL trend continues.

After a humiliating Monday night loss to San Diego Sept. 7, Cleveland has won two of its next three games. Pittsburgh was embarrassed in Miami in a Thursday night contest Sept. 10 and has reeled off two straight victories. Following a Monday night beating administered by Oakland Sept. 14, Minnesota has won two in a row.

And now the banged-up Bears, 2-7 losers to Los Angeles last Monday night, seek to get back into the NFL Central Division picture against the 2-2 Vikings. It would help if they knew who their quarterback was.

Mike Phipps, who last started against the Vikings in 1979, is the likely candidate to start Sunday, but it's anyone's guess who will finish. Phipps will probably get the call over backup Rob Averill and regular Vince Evans, who suffered a shoulder injury against the Rams.

Evans, though, is far from the only sidelined regular in the Bears' offense. Wide receiver Ricky Watts suffered a pulled hamstring, tight end

"It's not to our advantage being on the short week after Monday night with those injuries," Armstrong said, "but we've pulled together before and that's what we're going to have to do again. I'll tell you this — this team won't quit."

Phipps replaced Averill, who had replaced Evans, against the Rams and completed seven of 12 passes for 108 yards and one touchdown. He was sacked three times, and the Vikings came off an eight-game game against Green Bay.

"We would've liked to play the Bears Monday night instead of Sunday," said Vikings Coach Bud Grant, whose team has beaten Chicago three straight times. "The Bears aren't going to be feeling very good about their performance and I think we'll be the target."

While the Bears ponder their quarterback situation, Grant's mind has been eased by the rapid comeback of Tommy Kramer from a knee injury. Kramer, still slowed by a knee brace, was 19-for-34 for 253 yards and two TDs last week in a 30-13 victory over the Packers, while Ted Brown rushed for 109 yards on 21 carries. Brown's other 100-yard game was against the Bears last year in a 34-14 Minnesota victory.

The Vikings, who have blocked a startling 50 kicks since 1976, have beaten the Bears nine straight times.

at the Met, but the last seven games between the clubs have been decided by a touchdown or less.

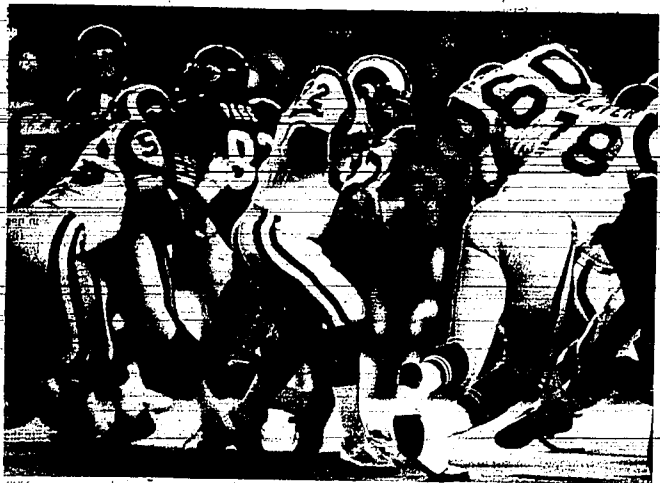

Elsewhere Sunday, it's Detroit at Tampa Bay, Kansas City at New England, Baltimore at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Houston, Denver at Oakland, the New York Jets at Seattle, San Diego at Dallas, St. Louis, Green Bay at the New York Giants, San Francisco at Washington, Cleveland at Los Angeles and Pittsburgh at New Orleans.

Atlanta is at Philadelphia Monday night.

Detroit and Tampa Bay, 2-2, share the NFC Central lead with Minnesota and both teams come off victories. The Lions' Billy Sims is the third-ranked rusher in the NFL with 402 yards and he leads the NFC with six TDs. Jeff Krome will replace Gary Danielson (dislocated wrist) as Detroit's starting quarterback. Rookie fullback James Wilder had a big day for the Buccaneers last week, accounting for 148 yards in total offense.

Kansas City, 3-1, is tied with Denver and San Diego atop the AFC West, while the Bengals have recently joined Washington as the NFL's only winless team. The Patriots are off to their worst start since 1975 and Matt Cavanaugh has replaced Steve Grogan as the No. 1 quarterback. Fullback Sam Cunningham, who last week played in his first NFL game since 1978, is expected to get active work against the Chiefs' league-leading ground defense.

Cullen Bryant and the Rams found plenty of running room against the Bears Monday night.

Rams, Browns off big wins

By RICH TOSCHES
UPI Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams and Cleveland Browns both coming off impressive performances last week in an otherwise dismal season, square off Sunday with the not-to-lofty goal of going over the .500 mark.

The Rams evened their record at 2-2 Monday night with their best game of the year, a 24-7 romp over the "Bad News" Bears of Chicago. And after losing two of their first three games, the Rams will take a win when they can get one.

The Browns, on the other hand, moved to 2-2 with a decisive 28-17 victory over the previously unbeaten Atlanta Falcons, possibly the NFL's best team. Cleveland could be emerging as one of the league's better teams, and the Browns see Sunday's matchup as a chance to continue building their momentum.

For the Rams, survival seems a main interest. Their other win came against the hapless Green Bay Packers after they were beaten by Houston in the season opener and then were stunned by the New Orleans Saints in week No. 2.

At the heart of the Rams' problems this year has been the play of quarterback Pat Haden. In the first 10 games Haden played miserably, throwing nearly as many interceptions as touchdowns. Against Green Bay he got off to a slow start, then sustained severely bruised ribs in the second quarter. He sat out the rest of the game, but came back strong against Chicago.

In that game Haden turned in his best outing of the season, leading the club on touchdown drives of 71, 89 and 55 yards. He completed 13 of 29 passes for 210 yards without an interception.

But the key to the Rams' win was the sterling play of their defense, which held Chicago to 223 total yards — 88 rushing and 135 passing — and held vaunted running back Walter Payton to just 45 yards on 17 carries.

The big play was a 55-yard punt return for a touchdown by Leroy Irvin — the Rams' first punt return for a TD in 20 years — which gave the Rams a 17-0 lead.

But the Browns pose a much stiffer test for the Rams' defense than the Bears. Against Atlanta they unleashed a solid running attack and used it to get up the passing of Brian Sipe.

Led by Mike Pruitt (21 rushes for 98 yards) and 1979 Helmsman Trophy winner Charles White (17 carries for 72 yards), the Browns continually opened holes through the tough Atlanta defensive line. When the Falcons began playing the run, Sipe went to work, completing 21 of 34 passes for 215 yards to seven different receivers.

"Being able to run better, that's the key to the whole thing," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano. "It helps our passing game and in a way it also improves our defense because we're better balanced and we're able to do a lot more things."

Rutigliano said the key to the offense, in addition to Sipe, is the running of White, Pruitt and Cleo Miller.

"Obviously, Miller and Pruitt are two fine fullbacks," he said. "Plus we have a complete player at halfback in Charles White. We had been a fullback-oriented team, but now Charlie fills in as a running back as well as a blocking back."

Chargers trade Dean for SF draft choice

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Chargers announced Friday they have traded seven-year All-Pro defensive end Fred Dean to the San Francisco 49ers for the 49ers' second draft choice in 1983.

Additionally, the Chargers get the option of exchanging first-round draft choices with the 49ers in 1983. The Chargers must notify the 49ers whether they want to make the switch by Feb. 1, 1983.

Dean, a two-time selection to the Pro Bowl and regarded as one of the NFL's finest pass rushers, told the Chargers earlier this week that he would sit out for the next two years unless his contract was renegotiated.

According to Dean, he was the lowest paid six-year defensive lineman in the league last year, making less than $70,000, including incentives, and claimed he was even paid less than the average salary of all defensive linemen in the league. He had a contract with the Chargers through 1984.

The 6-foot-2, 230-pound Dean was the Chargers' second draft selection in 1975 from Louisiana Tech. Although one of the smallest defensive linemen in the league, Dean broke into the starting lineup as a rookie in the first game of the 1975 season.

In 1979, Dean was selected as the AFC Defensive Player of the Year after attaining a career-high 15 1/2 quarterback sacks. He was named to the AFC's Pro Bowl team after the last two seasons.

Chargers Owner Eugene Klein has a policy of not renegotiating the contracts of any player on the team.

Job security already concerns several coaches

By BRIAN HEWITT
© 1981 Chicago Sun-Times

The Bears' Neil Armstrong isn't the only NFL coach with job security problems. Jets coach Walt Michaels and Rams boss Ray Malavasi reportedly saw their positions with victories last week.

In New England, where the Patriots are 0-4, owner Billy Sullivan did his best to dispel rumors about Ron Erhardt's coaching future. "The only way Erhardt won't be coaching the Patriots at the end of the season is if I die before the season is over," Sullivan said. "And I don't plan on that happening. But even if I do, he will be the coach at the end of the season because I know our family feels the same way about him as I do. So you can bet on it."

Don't bet on it.

Meanwhile in Seattle, where the enigmatic Seahawks are 1-3 and in last place in the AFC West, controversial coach Jack Patera has a long-term contract but lots of grief.

Onetime Seahawk quarterback Steve Myer recently ripped Patera, saying: "The Seahawks have the talent to win football games and to get into the playoffs. But the problem, even while I was playing, is that the desire and the motivation are not quite there. Football is an inspirational game, a motivational game. I just wish we had a coach like Dick Vermeil. We need a players' coach — someone who will get right in with the players. We don't need negative criticism all the time."

THEY SAID IT: San Diego defensive tackle Louie Kelcher, 6-5, 282, about his time in the 40-yard dash: "I have to run 40 yards to catch somebody. I ain't gonna catch him no how."

Cleveland coach Rutigliano on advice he once received from his father: "He told me, 'If ever you have an opportunity to keep your mouth shut, take advantage of it.'"

Dorothy Shula, wife of Miami coach Don Shula: "I'm fairly confident that if I died tomorrow, Don would find a way to preserve me 'till the season was over and he had time for a nice funeral."

Former St. Louis kicker Jim Bakken, when asked if former coach, the intense Don Coryell, had ulcers: "No. But he's a carrier."

Oakland punter Ray Guy, on conditions in the New Orleans Superdome: "You just have to figure out which way the air conditioning is blowing."

Former Dallas All-Pro Booby Lyles, on the tradition of playing on Thanksgiving: "I always considered it an advantage for us. The short week didn't give us enough time to get confused."

For years television has portrayed Dallas coach Tom Landry as a ice cube. Recently Landry made his rare public attempt at introspection regarding his seeming lack of emotion during games:

"Emotion is something you can express if you don't have the responsibility of making important decisions immediately. If you call plays, you don't have time for emotion. Any time you show emotion, your concentration or trend of thought is broken. Any time you look at the scoreboard and start thinking whether you're behind or ahead, whether you're going to win or lose, there's a blank in your concentration."

"You won't do anything positive at that point. I believe who's outstanding in sports must have the ability to concentrate completely. Any time there's a break in concentration your chances of winning may slip past at just that moment. That's why I've trained myself — because I believe the key to success is concentration during the battle. I very seldom see or hear what's going on and that's where my whole reputation comes from."

A fan can get excited over a play. He looks down at me and I don't do anything. I don't show any excitement. Well, to him, that's no emotion. More than likely I didn't see it to start with. I was looking at the defense or doing something else."

"Now, I can watch a game that I'm not involved in but have an interest in and get just as upset as anyone."

Fighting for respect

Oilers, Bengals battle for AFC Central lead

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals will be fighting for respect and tie lead in the AFC Central Division Sunday in the Astrodome.

The Bengals, 3-1 and off to their best start in five years, are coming off a 27-24 upset over Buffalo. The Oilers, 2-2, and disappointing in coach Ed Biles' first year, were routed 33-17 by the New York Jets.

Bengals' quarterback Ken Anderson has had problems this year, drawing boos from his fans, but last week he completed 28-of-40 passes against Buffalo and Coach Forrest Gregg had lots of praise for his quarterback.

"I don't see how anyone can boo Anderson now," Gregg said. "I don't know how anyone could play a better football game than Anderson did. Kenny was playing under a great deal of stress."

The Bengal defense has only six quarterback sacks this year and ranks 10th in the AFC in pass defense. But they are coming against an Oilers' team that has suffered 19 sacks in four games.

Biles hopes the repeated sacks will end with the Oilers' dramatic mid-season shift in offensive strategy.

Biles, who had been hoping to diversify and improve the Earl Campbell-focused Oiler offense, admitted failure this week and announced the team will return to the conservative, run-oriented, 1-formation offense of the past.

"We're going to buckle our chinchamps, bloody our noses and go straight at them," promised tight end Mike Barber. "That's won a lot of ballgames for us in the past. But we've gotten away from it a little this year."

"We've been thinking too much on the field and not reacting enough. With the 1, you don't have time to think. All you can do is beat down and knock people off the line of scrimmage. That's why I like it."

Biles said the Oilers will use the 1 at least 75 percent of the time against the Bengals. The hope is that it will improve their puny offensive statistics so far this year.

A mid-season comparison shows the Oilers have 46 first downs compared to 86 this time last year and 941 yards compared to 1,312 this time last year. They have converted only eight of 51 third-down situations compared to 23 of 53 at this time in 1980.

Punctuating the change in offense, the Oilers this week traded running back Rob Carpenter to the New York Giants. To fill Carpenter's spot on the roster, the team re-signed running-back Rich Thomaselli, who was cut in training camp.

Ferragamo will stick it out

MONTREAL (UPI) — Quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who has yet to meet Montreal's million-dollar expectations, Friday denied a report which said he would not return to the Canadian Football League's Alouettes next season.

Ferragamo, who was lured from the NFL's Los Angeles Rams with the most lucrative contract ever afforded a CFL player, has performed dismally thus far in 1981, compiling the lowest completion percentage (.535) of any regular quarterback in the league and also leading in interceptions (21).

"Despite the poor statistics and the Alouettes' dreadful 1-10 record, Ferragamo insists he is not trying to

"I think we all have a commitment here with the Alouettes and that's to turn this thing around and get into the playoffs," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, I'm obligated by my contract which I signed with Montreal and I think it's a fine contract."

Ferragamo has had to share the quarterbacking duties with last-year's starter, Gerry Dattilio, since new coach Jim Eddy assumed the reins from Joe Scannella, who was fired following the Alouettes' ninth loss of the season in mid-September.

The former Nebraska star said that he was not aware of any attempt by either his agent, David Fisher, or Montreal Owner Nelson Skalbania to end his relationship with the club.

Mississippi State has chance to build image as a power

By MIKE TULLY
UPI Sports Writer

Ninth-ranked Mississippi State, having established itself as a power in the Southeast Conference, opens a stretch of three non-league games Saturday by hosting 17th-rated Missouri.

The match amounts to an opportunity to build confidence and image for the Bulldogs, who have already achieved the highest ranking in their history and who hope to win their first SEC title in 40 years.

Mississippi State, a four-point favorite this week, held Florida to minus-10 yards rushing last week to take over the SEC lead. The Bulldogs rank second in the nation in scoring defense, having allowed only 19 points; Clemson is first with 18, and Southern Miss fifth with 20.

Mississippi State, 8-2 last season including a 6-3 upset of Alabama, and Missouri are both off to 3-0 starts. MSU Coach Emory Bellard enjoys the ranking and the won-lost record, but realizes the hardest work is to come.

"Getting there is tough," he says, "but the real chore is staying there. I think our players can handle it. I would be lying if I said we weren't extremely proud of this group for the rating. That's why you play the game. You try to excel."

The Bulldogs play Colorado State away and Miami home before resuming their drive to the SEC title on Oct. 24 at Auburn.

In other Saturday action, No. 4 Pitt will play at South Carolina, which would love to avenge its 37-9 loss to the Panthers in the 1980 Gator Bowl.

It won't be easy. Pitt is undefeated after two games this season and is led by quarterback Dan Marino, who is close to becoming the Panthers' all-time passing leader. With 474 yards and seven touchdowns in two games, Marino is second behind Rick Troceno. Marino has a total of 3,761 career passing yards.

Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill and offensive coordinator Joe Moore are concerned about the Gamecocks, who have been beaten by both Mississippi and Georgia.

"Every team they played, they put lumps on them," Moore said. "South Carolina has a tough, physical, defensive line and they have a secondary that comes at you. They are not to be taken lightly."

Sixth-ranked Oklahoma, which lost last week to Southern Cal and which faces No. 3 Texas next week, hosts Iowa State to kick off the Big Eight Conference season.

Like USC and Texas, Iowa State is 3-0, but the Cyclones have lost 20 straight games to Oklahoma dating back to 1961, and Iowa State Coach Donnie Duncan agrees things should be no easier this time.

"I don't think there is an opportune time to play Oklahoma," Duncan said. "I don't think they'll be thinking of Texas. And as for USC, the way that game ended up, I don't think that diminished their confidence in the least. The only way that would help us would be if Oklahoma had decided to stay out in California and play USC two weeks in a row."

Oklahoma has the fourth, fifth and sixth-leading rushers in the conference in halfback Buster Rhymes (136 yards), fullback Stanley Wilson (140 yards) and backup quarterback Darrell Shepard (116 yards). Starting quarterback Kelly Phelps has also rushed for 131 yards and 130 touchdowns.

The rest of the top-10 schools shapes up like this: top-ranked USC faces Oregon State, No. 2 Penn State plays Temple, No. 3 Texas is idle, No. 5 North Carolina encounters Georgia Tech, No. 7 Ohio State meets Florida State, No. 8 Michigan tackles Indiana and No. 10 Alabama squares off against Mississippi.

Rockets open camp as 11 return from championship team

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets opened training camp Friday for the upcoming 1981-82 season, joined by veteran guard Calvin Murphy who signed a three-year contract following weeks of negotiations.

"Everyone is anxious to get started and there seems to be a basic carry-over from our playoff performance last year," said head coach Del Harris.

Eleven players who made up Houston's Western Conference championship team returned to the team and were joined by veteran forward Elvin Hayes, free agent Jawahar Muhammad and fourth-round draft choice Larry Spriggs. The Rockets lost in the NBA finale last year to Boston.

Forward Rudy Tomjanovich said Thursday he was retiring and would not return to play the 1981-82 season. Tomjanovich had two years left on his contract and will remain as a consultant to general manager Ray Patterson.

"I'm leaving the game on a positive note. It's not a sad time. It's a very happy time. I feel like I've had a very satisfactory career," Tomjanovich said. "I've been able to spend my career in one city."

Tomjanovich, 32, a 6-foot-8 forward who averaged 17.4 points per game in his 11-year career that began in 1970 with the Rockets, had his best seasons from 1972 through 1979. He averaged 24.5 points per game in 1973-74.

Rookies Ed Turner and Jerome Henderson were originally invited to attend the camp, but Turner was shot in the ankle Monday when he became involved in a dispute near his Buffalo, N.Y., home, and Henderson is suffering from a lung infection.

Harris said that he has had an opportunity to coach everyone on the team except Hayes, so training camp will not be much of a teaching session. "What we want to do in this camp is re-establish those good habits which we developed late last year. We want to re-establish the defensive techniques and our offensive style, whereby we are able to recognize what is a fast break and what isn't," Harris said.

"When we don't have the break,

RUDY TOMJANOVICH ends playing career

then we'll go into our power game and work from the inside back out. We're no longer in a position where we have to sell our guys on a system which will work. They saw it work last year."

Harris said that during the training camp at Houston Baptist University he planned to break up the two-a-day workouts about every third day.

"When you have 15 or less players in your camp, you just don't need two-a-days all the time," he said.

Team members are scheduled to receive physical examinations Friday.

The Rockets will play their first exhibition game Oct. 14 against Philadelphia at The Summit, and the regular season, which spans six months, begins Oct. 30 in Los Angeles.

Knicks back to work
WEST-LONG BRANCH, N.J. (UPI) — The New York Knicks, opening their training camp at Monmouth College, extended the contract of veteran guard Mike Newlin Friday and announced the end of a comeback bid by former Knicks forward Hawthorne Wingo.

"We spoke yesterday with Mike and his agent Bob Wolff," said New York general manager Eddie Donovan in announcing the contract extension for Wingo.

The 10-year pro, "We're extremely pleased that everything has worked out this way."

Wingo was attempting a comeback, but the 6-foot-8 forward underwent a physical examination Thursday at Lenox Hill Hospital and Dr. Norman Scott diagnosed a slight arthritis condition in the left hip. Wingo then announced he would retire from basketball.

Barnes tries another comeback
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Marvin Barnes, whose basketball headlines were made with missed practices and troubles with the law, headed for the New Jersey Nets training camp Friday for one more attempt to turn his career around.

"I still want to prove that I can do things right. I've already proved that I can do things wrong," Barnes said. "My goal is to bring respectability to my name."

A Nets spokesman said Barnes was due at the camp at Ramapo College in Mahwah, N.J., Friday night or today. The 5-foot-9 forward said that the Nets offered him a contract based on his play for the Nets' entry in a California summer league.

Barnes said the pact, containing no guarantees, would give him $10,000 a month "for every month I stay with the team. If I miss a day, that's the end of $10,000 for that month."

The Providence native and 1971 All-America player at Providence College ran into trouble in 1973 when he was accused of hitting college teammate Larry Kettvirt with a tire iron.

In 1975, Barnes began his professional basketball career with the Spirits of St. Louis of the old American Basketball Association. He went on to brief stints with the Detroit Pistons, Buffalo Braves, Boston Celtics and San Diego Clippers of the NBA. He played last winter with an Italian pro team, Hurlingham, of Trieste.

Barnes' career was interrupted with a state prison term for violating the conditions of his probation after the Kettvirt incident.

Whalers trade Rogers for younger players

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The Hartford Whalers Friday climaxed a whirlwind series of moves to launch its NHL season with young blood.

The team shipped its all-time high scorer, Mike Rogers, to the New York Rangers for left wing Doug Sullman and defenseman Chris Kotopoulos and Gerry McDonald. In another deal, the Whalers acquired Garry Howatt from the New York Islanders for future considerations.

The popular Rogers, 27, had played in every Whalers game in the past four seasons and scored 185 points in his last two seasons. He accumulated 182 goals and 285 assists in six years with Hartford.

Acquired by the Whalers in 1976 from the Edmonton Oilers, Rogers scored 40 goals and had 55 assists with the Whalers last season.

In addition to Rogers, the Rangers will receive "future considerations." It was announced by Larry Pleau, Whalers head coach and director of operations.

The trade culminated a series of moves by Pleau, who was elevated from assistant coach last year in a shakeup that saw the firing of head coach Don Blackburn and Jack Kelley, who was director of hockey operations.

Pleau said although Rogers was highly valued, the addition of the three younger players "will definitely strengthen the Whaler organization."

Kotopoulos, 21, and Sullman, 22, "will give us immediate help," Pleau said. "They are young but definitely of National Hockey League caliber."

McDonald is 23. The Whalers have now acquired five players under the age of 23. In addition to the three Rangers, Hartford earlier picked up defenseman Blake Wesley, 22, and right winger Don Gillen, 20, from Philadelphia.

Pleau said the trade "is in keeping with our philosophy of putting a young, competitive team on the ice. They are part of our future."

Sullman was drafted by the Rangers in 1979 and played 32 games last season, scoring four goals and adding one assist. Kotopoulos, a starter for the Rangers, played 34 games last season and is considered a prime defenseman, said Pleau.

McDonald played in 70 games for the New Haven Nighthawks, the Rangers' AHL affiliate, and had six goals and 23 assists.

On Thursday, Hartford had announced the purchase of defenseman Paul Shmyr from the Minnesota North Stars. Pleau said Shmyr, Minnesota's team captain the past two seasons, was "a leader who is not afraid to play a physical game of hockey. Shmyr is expected to bolster the Whalers' defense."

Shmyr played from 1970 to 1976 for the Cleveland Crusaders in the old World Hockey Association, the San Diego Mariners for the 1976-77 season and the Edmonton Oilers from 1977-1979. He appeared in 61 games last season for the North Stars.

Rockies end sale agreement

DENVER (UPI) — Peter Gilbert, owner of the Colorado Rockies NHL franchise, said Friday a tentative agreement to sell half of the club to a Canadian communications executive had been terminated.

Gilbert said he and Don Reed of Edmonton, Alberta had not been able to reach a definite agreement on the "documents dealing with the proposed partnership. All discussions of a partnership with Mr. Reed have been terminated."

Gilbert had announced Sept. 17 that he had reached tentative agreement to sell a 50 percent interest in the Rockies to Reed. Gilbert said the principle reason for the partnership was to obtain additional financing for the franchise.

Reed owns and operates Reed Communications Ltd.

St. Louis obtains Johansen

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Blues Friday claimed defenseman Trevor Johansen on waivers from the Colorado Rockies.

A team spokesman said the Blues will not have to give the Rockies compensation for Johansen, 24, who was a first-round choice by the Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1977 amateur draft.

Johansen was traded by Toronto to Colorado in 1979.

A right-handed shooter, Johansen scored no goals in 35 games last season with the Rockies. He had seven assists and 18 penalty minutes. In his NHL career, Johansen has seven goals in 227 games, 36 assists and 209 penalty minutes.

Johansen is expected to join the Blues Saturday in time for the Blues' exhibition game against the Chicago Black Hawks.

The Blues open their regular season Tuesday night at home against the Pittsburgh Penguins.
